ROOSEVELT URGES BONUS DELAY

Today

Cleveland, Mighty City.
One Live Brain Cell.
Miss Telkes, Ph. D.
Double Rat, Lion's Heart.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

CLEVELAND, Oct. 20.

THIS IS ONE of the really great and powerful American cities, big in population, wealth, energy and education.

You could describe her fine business buildings, great stores, the new, latest, most perfect railroad terminal, fine schools, Euclid avenue, where the powerful Mark Hanna used to live, with McKinley and other Republicans under his wing, and where John D. Rockefeller was planning his empire so long ago.

But you that read would surely be more interested in the wonderful biological laboratory in which Dr. George W. Crile and his associates carry on experiments that, at some future date, might save your life, and will surely save and prolong the lives of millions yet unborn.

A GROUP of huge buildings contain in one the department of diagnostics, where doctors find out what is the matter with you. In another the hospital, where surgery and other treatment cures you.

In a third, the laboratory of biological experiment, where able scientists, dealing with the new world of knowledge, study methods of prevention cure, and work at the problem of UNDERSTANDING DISEASE.

NO DRY technical discourse could make the average reader take an interest in biology, which is the science of life. But you will read on when told that you are to hear about a perfect brain cell, living, breathing, eating, entirely separated from the brain and the skull in which it once lived.

And there are other wonders, the female rabbits that give information about human babies, unborn, the white rats that add to knowledge of the mysterious endocrine glands, the cancer tissue that emits ultra violet rays, created mysteriously as the cancer cells divide the light, strong in proportion to the rapidity of the division, with endless other proofs of man's marvelous intellectual power.

HERE IN a room where the solitary brain cell lives by itself, under a microscope, a deep young voice informs you that presently she will let you see a new synthetic brain cell in process of formation. Miss Maria Telkes, youthful and beautiful Hungarian highbrow, owns the voice and bosses the lonesome separate brain cells.

She is a doctor of philosophy, with a high forehead, appallingly full of live brain cells and her rapid description of the "analysis and synthesis of brain tissue," which she considers suited to the intelligence of a child of twelve, makes you wish you could add that living separate brain cell to your own equipment.

THE BRAIN substance, specks almost too small to see, lives in a protein solution in which it exists, very much as you do. It eats, drinks, breathes, feeds on the protein in a solution also made of brain substance.

It is, in reality, a cannibal brain cell. But Miss Telkes thinks little of your attempt to impress her with that suggestion. She is a scientist, everything else bores her.

That live brain cell, like yourself, dies if poison is added to its diet, dies if deprived of oxygen. It absorbs more oxygen, lives more energetically if stimulated with a little alcohol.

Those that absorb bootleg alcohol might remember that in connection with their own brain cells.

INTO A small glass, Doctor Maria Telkes pours a little of the protein solution, the brain cell's food. She adds a tiny quantity of synthetic brain solution, spreads the mixture on a glass slide, and under the microscope you see a living brain cell take shape beneath your eye.

You must say something and ask:

"How many atoms of matter do you suppose that cell contains?"

"Oh, trillions."

The young woman wonders why you want to know, she despises facts that have no value.

BUT IT is pleasing to know that you might count rapidly for one thousand years and not begin to count all the atoms in one of your brain cells. It gives you a respect for your brain, and you need it, after Doctor Telkes has explained her science "simply."

SUCH AN "isolated, live brain cell," supplied with food, oxygen, water, kept free from germs which attack it, as they do you, lives from three weeks to nine months, depending on conditions.

You must have some "last line" for a young doctor of philosophy, who has been "talking down to you." You remark:

"Dr. Telkes, there are many great concerns in America, industrial, financial and political, that would gladly buy that live brain cell from you. They need it."

And you move on to visit the live white rats, accompanied by Doctor W. E. Lower, who was present and helped at the birth of the great clinic, and Dr. Russell Haden, who show and explain as much as they think you can understand.

A ROOM lined with small cages containing white rats, is to science what a vault filled with gold is to business. And these rats, running about, eating, raising their little families, recovering after an operation, live without any notion that a higher power rules, directs and controls.

In fact they live very much

POLICE HEAD GLASSFORD RESIGNS

Capital Chief, Friend Of Bonus Vets, Quits in Row

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of Washington police, who was at odds with administration members over the calling of troops to evict the bonus army, has tendered his resignation to the District of Columbia commissioners.

Glassford, a retired brigadier general, disputed statements by his superiors that he had said troops were necessary to restore order following clashes between veterans and police. He contended calling of the troops who drove the veterans from government property with tear gas and bayonets was unnecessary and challenged a statement of Attorney General Mitchell which said the bonus army brought to Washington "the largest aggregation of criminals ever assembled in the city at one time" as being erroneous.

His resignation, however, grew out of official opposition to changes in personnel he wished to make in the police department.

BROKER HOLMAN DIES, NESBIT KIN

C. J. (Charlie) Holman, 70, familiar figure at the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange for a quarter of a century, and step-father of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, is dead in his home, 806 Washington road, Mt. Lebanon.

At the time of his retirement the first of this year, Mr. Holman was chairman of the exchange. Previously he had been secretary for 18 years and was known throughout the financial district as the "Sec."

He had been in ill health for some months. Pneumonia was the immediate cause of death. He was a Mason. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Florence Holman, formerly Mrs. Nesbit.

Former Meat Packer Plunges to Death

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—George M. Willetts, former vice president of Armour & Co., today plunged to death from a window of his eleventh-floor apartment. Mrs. Willetts was in the apartment at the time.

Willetts resigned recently. He was injured in an automobile accident and had been unable to work for a year.

CHILD LINKS FATHER IN MURDER

State-Wide Search on As Girl, 5, Tells of 'Ride' Into Woods

International News Service.

PALMYRA, Pa., Oct. 20.—A child of 5 lisped a story for police today and unwittingly linked her father with the slaying of his estranged wife.

As authorities throughout the state sought Tilden Weaber, a tale they believe may explain his wife's death fell simply and naively from the lips of Betty, youngest of eight Weaber children. Mrs. Kate Weaber, the mother, was found in the woods near Orwigsburg, Schuylkill County, late yesterday afternoon, her throat slashed.

In the presence of David P. Palmer, chief of Palmyra police, little Betty today unfolded the story that her father had taken her yesterday morning to visit her mother, employed as a housekeeper in Reading.

She hesitated a moment, and then, according to Balmer, said:

"I don't know; but it was in the woods. Mamma was crying."

She was asked:

"Were your daddy and mother quarreling?"

"Yes."

"Why did Daddy leave Mamma in the woods?"

"We didn't leave her there. She just stayed there."

"Did you and your daddy go home then?"

"Yes."

LINK AUTO TRIP

Betty could shed no more light on her mother's death. Police attached great importance to her simple story because an automobile, with a man, woman and a child as passengers had been seen stopping earlier in the day near the spot where Mrs. Weaber's body was later found.

Prince and Princess Wed Amid Pomp

COBURG, Germany, Oct. 20.—(INS.)—Three days of pompous festivities attending the first royal wedding since the war were climaxed today in the religious ceremony uniting in marriage Princess Sybille of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha and Prince Gustaf Adolf, son of the Crown Prince of Sweden, and in direct line for the throne.

Royalty and nobility from all over Europe, beautifully-gowned and brilliantly-uniformed, attended the ceremony, which was reminiscent of the grandeur of the height of Germany's imperial power.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, FORCEFUL OF MANNER, ADDRESSING 35,000 AT FORBES FIELD

Bridesmaid Vanishes, Elopement Hinted

Nineteen-year-old Mary was a bridesmaid just last night at the wedding of her brother, Joe.

And today she can't be found. Neither can a certain young man in Johnstown. In fact, he left Johnstown quietly last night for Pittsburgh. So today Mary's parents hurried to Johnstown to see whether the young couple had returned.

The police believe Mary and the boy friend are now Mr. and Mrs. . . . .

Mooney's Mother To Attend Red Meet

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(INS.)—Mrs. Mary Mooney, 84, mother of Tom Mooney, imprisoned in California as a result of the fatal Preparedness Day parade bombing in San Francisco, will sail October 28 for Moscow to attend the world congress of the International Red Aid.

HOOVER LEADS IN PENNA. POLL

By COLE E. MORGAN

The Republican candidate now holds an unbroken chain of states reaching from Maine to and including Ohio.

He is picking up in Michigan and Illinois.

By MARK SHIELDS

Opposing as "a matter of practical sense" payment of the soldier bonus so long as the federal budget is unbalanced, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, before 35,000 people at Forbes Field last night, linked a possible future payment of the bonus to measures of governmental economy and increased revenue through a tax on legalized beer and on alcoholic beverages, the latter avenue of income to be opened through repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

These high spots of his speech, coming near the end of an address devoted largely to the budget, and which required more than an hour for its delivery, brought ringing cheers from the crowd which filled the three tiers of the grandstand, portions of the bleachers and overflowed to the field territory back of the foul lines along first and third base.

It was the largest political audience in the history of Pittsburgh, and the greatest the Democratic presidential candidate has addressed during his present campaign, according to newspapermen who have been with him on other tours.

The Democratic candidate's pronouncement on the bonus, delivered in a slow and measured tone, apparently with a full realization that an expression on the subject had been eagerly awaited in this campaign, followed an arraignment of what he termed former President Coolidge's "baseless and absurd" charge that his silence on the subject thus far had retarded business.

Apparently angry, Roosevelt said:

"I note that former President Coolidge is reported as having said in a speech in New York City: 'An early and timely word from the Democratic candidate for President that he would reject the proposal to increase the national debt by $2,300,000,000 to pay a bonus would have been a great encouragement to business, reduced unemployment, and guaranteed the integrity of the national credit. While he remained silent economic recovery was measurably impeded.'

'CHARGE ABSURD'

"That charge is baseless and absurd for the reason that last April my views on the subject were widely published and have been subsequently frequently quoted. I said, 'I do not see how, as a matter of practical sense, a government running behind two billion dollars annually can consider the anticipation of bonus payment until it has a balanced budget, not only on paper, but with a surplus of cash in the Treasury.'

"No one, for political purposes

Heckler Questions Davis on Lottery

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—United States Senator James J. Davis asserted in a political speech last night that higher tariffs should be imposed on nations off the gold standard.

The speaker described working conditions abroad as he observed them on a trip through Europe. A heckler shouted:

"Hey, Jim, did you sell any lottery tickets over there?"

Davis ignored the interruption.

Film Actress Stabbed In Hollywood Home

Charles Morton, motion picture actor, who, police said, was in the apartment when a physician arrived, was quoted as saying that Miss Rose stabbed herself. Clad only in a silken robe, the actress was taken to a nearby hospital.

Can Vote Own Ideas, Edison Tells Workers

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 20.—(INS.)—Employes of the Edison companies were confronted on their arrival for work today by a bulletin signed by Charles Edison informing them that they have the right "to vote according to their own ideas."

PANIC TALK HIT BY ROOSEVELT

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—To a throng covering every inch of space in this city's wide Monument Circle, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt shouted the assertion today that the nation is "remaining calm in the face of organized and ruthless propaganda of eleventh-hour political desperation which damages the old ghost of panic before our eyes."

After remarking about the "great outpouring," estimated at more than 50,000, and indorsing candidacies of the Democratic senatorial and gubernatorial nominees, Gov. Roosevelt told his hearers:

"It is my belief that this campaign marks the beginning of a new deal in American politics and in the conduct of American government."

He spoke from a lofty balcony of the Hotel English, following a tumultous reception and a parade through the city streets.

U. S. Raiders Seize Brandy Aboard Ship

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—A customs raiding party today seized 50 bottles of brandy aboard the Spanish liner Habana.

During the raid G. A. Bonino, an inspector, was locked in a cabin for about an hour until released by a sleepy steward.

Jobless Riot Greets Prince in London

LONDON, Oct. 20.—(INS.)—An unemployment demonstration broke out in the Poplar district of London this afternoon while Prince George was opening a new wing of the Queen Victoria Seamen's Rest.

THREE WOMEN :-: By Faith Baldwin

CHAPTER I.

The sewing room windows admitted the late spring sunlight with reluctance. The Brussels carpet received the pale flickering upon the worn places near the dresser as Henrietta Van Dusen rose from her rheumatic knees and thrust some superfluous pins into the cushion which hung fatly at her angular waist. Her sharp, anxious face was reddened by her late exertions, she drew breath heavily and stood aside that her cousin and employer might view herself and the new frock in the great cheval glass.

Louisa Lennox Sheldon nodded indifferently to her reflection. She was a tall woman, in her early thirties. The gown of green broadcloth fitted her to perfection, the velvet sleeves encased long, thin arms, the high collar encircled a slender throat, the tight basque embraced a tiny waist and the yards and yards of looped skirt were billowed over an enormous, built-in bustle.

Louisa saw an oval face, healthily pale, dark eyes, a little veiled, a long, firm upper lip, a straight, narrow lower one. And a mass of curling brown hair piled and fringed above the high narrow forehead and dropping, in a heavy clump, to the base of the long neck.

"It will do nicely," she commented, setting her thin hand to the constricted waist.

Henrietta sighed with relief. She got to her knees again, sat back on her run-down heels and twisted the skirt this way and that. Then she touched her damp face with roughened fingers. Louisa was satisfied, and upon Louisa's satisfaction Henrietta's roof, her bread and butter depended. Second cousin to the important Mrs. Sheldon, Henrietta had found a home with her, had sold her services for food and some trivial spending money—a knitted purse at Christmas, perhaps, with round coins in it.

In return Henrietta made herself useful. She ran errands, sewed, darned, fluttered about the big house on Washington Square, a witch-like figure of a woman, whose badly fitting false teeth clacked in a miniature panic when she was addressed abruptly.

Mrs. Sheldon glanced at the onyx clock on the marble-topped dresser. She said, in her cold, unhurried voice:

"Surely, it is time that Lennox came in?"

"It is such a lovely day—perhaps Nanna thought the additional time in the fresh air would benefit him."

Mrs. Sheldon made a restrained gesture.

"Nanna has her instructions," she said, with finality, and raised the hand to the hooks upon her shoulders.

Henrietta rose and made haste to free her cousin from the new gown. She laid it aside and turned to pick up the merino morning frock which lay across a chair. Mrs. Sheldon waited,

FOREWORD

THREE WOMEN of different generations, of conflicting natures, of totally dissimilar attitudes, of violently opposed ideas on the one thing most important to them all—their sex . . . The first, a Victorian type who ruled so many households in the eighties and nineties . . . The second, her docile daughter-in-law—a Gibson girl type so common in the early part of the Twentieth Century . . . The third—gay flower of the other two—post-war flapper and modern miss. How each sought to mold the other—succeeding or failing—makes the drama of THREE WOMEN, which opens in a prosperous New York home of the middle 80s—almost half a century in years (and fully an age in customs) before the present..

VAST THRONG PAYS TRIBUTE TO DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE

BANDS PARADE IN COLORFUL RECEPTION

Spectacular Ovation At Forbes Field Climaxes Trip

Presidential Candidate Franklin Delano Roosevelt sped westward today.

Following him were the echoes of thousands of handclaps, the cheers of countless voices — happy memories of yesterday's conquest.

For Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio paid him tribute during the day, and last night in Forbes Field 35,000 Pittsburghers acclaimed him the next president of the United States.

The grandstands began to fill at 7 o'clock and by 9 o'clock they approached capacity with 1,000 or more on the field.

FATHER COX ARRIVES

Father James R. Cox walked across the field amid cheers, as Senatorial Candidate Lawrence Rupp jabbed at national and state opponents, and the throng intermittently laughed and booed and roared—with approval.

A police siren sounded. A fife and drum corps' music floated in the arena. It was 9:10 p. m. The two-tone green and plumed hats of the band appeared.

Thirty-five thousand men stood on their feet.

The huge lights—football lights—were dimmed, then slowly grew dark. One huge beam from a searchlight focused on the rear seat of an automobile and the beaming face of Gov. Roosevelt stood out from the darkness.

A great wave of sound, like the voice of a giant, greeted him. Democratic chieftains shook his hands and led him and his son James to the rostrum.

PARADE OF BANDS

The din was unabated. The green-clad musicians paraded around the platform, built in the center of the diamond. Behind it other bands followed.

The Governor waved to the throngs again and again, but the uproar continued. Then he sat down to await the end of the cheering, the whistling, the enthusiastic din. When he arose, a band in a distant corner of the field played "America." There was, except for its strain, silence.

His talk over, 100 police attempted to hold back the crowd that tried to surround him, to shake his hands.

Many men and women of prominence were on the platform. Mayor Eddie McCloskey, hardly noticed until the Governor called him and exchanged greetings; Samuel Harden Church, liberal, who a few days ago announced his support of the Democratic nominee, members of the Democratic committees from here and adjoining states.

Lammot du Pont To Vote Republican

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Lammot du Pont, president of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., and chairman of the board of General Motors Company, announced last night that he intended to vote the Republican ticket.

In a formal statement he said that after analyzing the positions of the major parties on the economic situation and prohibition, it is the only course to follow at the coming election.

Lawrence Predicts G. O. P. Repudiation

David L. Lawrence, Democratic county chairman, opened Roosevelt rally at Forbes Field last night with the prediction that millions of independent voters will repudiate the leadership typified by the Hoover administration.

He introduced Edward C. Higbee, of Connellsville, Pa., Democratic candidate for the Supreme Court, who pledged that, if elected, he will dispense equal justice for all who come before that tribunal.

Tariff Ruins U. S. Trade, Says McAdoo

SAN FERNANDO, Cal., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—A charge that the Canadian market for $10,000,000 worth of California oranges yearly was destroyed by the Republican Smoot-Hawley tariff bill was made in a speech here yesterday by William Gibbs McAdoo, Democratic nominee for United States Senator.

Raskob Meets With Party Financiers

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(INS.)—The presence today of John J. Raskob at a luncheon attended by members of the finance committee of the Democratic party led political observers to believe that the full financial strength of the party was now behind Gov. Roosevelt.

A Strain on His Stamina -:- By QUIN HALL

SHOES BOUGHT FOR NEEDY

A conference of heads of welfare organizations serving Pittsburgh was held this afternoon to drafts plans for distribution of $50,000 worth of shoes bought from 25 dealers, contracts for which we signed by city officials today.

The shoes were finally purchased, principally in sizes suitable for school children, following nearly two months of delay. Early in September they had been promised for delivery by October 1, after the Welfare Department and relief heads had found many school children without shoes.

Distribution was expected to begin tomorrow under the direction of S. E. Claney, director of the Emergency Association.

Plant Dynamited In Ohio Mine Fight

URICHSVILLE, O., Oct. 20.—(INS.)—A sub-station of the Ohio Power Company was dynamited and nine guards engaged in a machine gun battle with a band of snipers at the Newport mine of the Wolford Coal Company early today.

No one was reported injured as a result of the violence, although the dynamiting of the electric sub-station caused damages estimated at approximately $2,500.

Ohio Gets $448,750 For Welfare Work

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—The Reconstruction Corporation today made available to the Governor of Ohio $447,750 to meet emergency relief needs in Youngstown, Mahoning County and Toledo, O. Youngstown is to receive $256,750 and Mahoning County $48,000.

The corporation also made available $922,252 to West Virginia to care for 17 counties.

Paralysis Kills Boy, Second in Cambria

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—John Richard Baker, 11 months, of Cresson, died of infantile paralysis, the second death from the disease in Cambria County in the last six weeks.

as we humans do. No intellectual white rat would admit that a supreme being, named Dr. Crile, controls his fate or brought him where he is.

You may see two rats that have been surgically joined together, during the operation, of course, under complete anaesthesia. No creature in that institution suffers serious pain. The two rats, made into one, facilitate study of the glands, still mysterious to science.

From one rat some important gland is removed and science observes the extent to which the survival of that gland in the attached rat makes up for the loss by transmission of hormones through the tissue. Such artificial rat-Siamese twins get along well, no quarrelling if well fed.

IN ANOTHER room rats are bred, hundreds of tiny white creatures, each group in a cage with the mother. She is not a particularly good mother, about what you would expect of a rat, raised in luxury, under easy circumstances.

You must see that she has meat often enough or she will eat her young ones. If any rat falls sick or is injured, the others usually eat it, for, in very truth, as Mr. George Washington Hill has often said:

"Nature in the raw is seldom mild."

SCIENCE IS long, newspaper columns are short.

The cosmic rays, made visible, the ultra violet rays, made audible, the strangely prophetic rabbit, the alligator's brain, and the lion's heart, all in that amazing laboratory, must wait until another day.

WOMAN'S RUSE FOILS BANDIT

NEWCHWANG, Manchuria, Oct. 20.—(INS.)—After almost six weeks in the hands of a gang of brigands headed by a chieftain known as "The Incarnation of Evil," Mrs. Muriel Pawley and Charles Corkran, British subjects, were rescued today through the efforts of British and Japanese diplomatic and military officials.

Mrs. Pawley, who is 19 and a bride of a few months, and Corkran were kidnaped and spirited away on September 7 while horseback riding on the old Newchwang race course.

The bandits demanded heavy ransom for their release, threatening to cut off their ears and then put them to death. Mrs. Pawley recently frightened Pei Pa-Tien, the bandit leader, by telling him she would return in spirit if he killed her and "transform his ancestors into turtles," and her clever play on Oriental superstition was believed responsible for the captives' release.

Not a Dime Invested Abroad, Says Hoover

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—(AP.)—In a telegram received by C. C. Teague, head of the Republican campaign in Southern California, President Hoover stated he has not "had a dime's interest" in any activity outside the United States during the last 15 years.

The telegram was in response to an inquiry from Teague, who informed the nation's executive, oil workers in California were receiving political pamphlets charging Mr. Hoover opposed the tariff on oil because of ownership of foreign oil wells.

MELLON BACKS PRESIDENT IN BRITISH TALK

Cites Hoover Fight to End Slump, Holds Opposition Unfair

MANCHESTER, England, Oct. 20. — (AP.) — United States Ambassador Andrew W. Mellon gave his complete indorsement to the record of the Hoover administration today in an address before the English-Speaking Union.

He indorsed the measures taken by the administration to meet the economic crisis, he denied that the American tariff has had the adverse effect on trade with which it sometimes has been credited, and he expressed regret that the American election is not to be decided on the merits of important policy, "but rather on the vague and general issue of discontent with existing conditions." He said:

"There is a disposition on the part of many people which is not unnatural perhaps, however unfair it may be, to blame the President and his administration for the calamities which have overtaken America and the world.

PRAISES PRESIDENT

"In the case of President Hoover it is particularly unfair, for no one has worked harder—and, I think, more intelligently and with more courage and vision—than has the President both in his efforts to avoid impending calamities and to minimize their effects when they came."

Mellon explained how the United States goes about "the always difficult business of choosing a government."

On the major issues, he said, Republicans and Democrats do not differ greatly. On prohibition, agriculture, taxation, even on tariffs, he said, "they are nearer together today than ever before." He added:

"The real question is not what should be done but how it is to be done. The President and his advisers have built for the nation temporary shelters against the economic hurricane, and a defense against fear and panic."

He described the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, measures for expansion of the powers of the Federal Reserve System, new taxes to balance the budget and other emergency steps. He continued:

"As a result of these measures we have been able to meet in full every demand that could be made upon us. We have proved that our financial strength is more than adequate to withstand any shock from the outside world, and that no power outside the country can undermine the dollar."

BLAMES WAR FOR SLUMP

He outlined the American efforts to co-operate with other nations to restore world finances, mentioning America's wholehearted support of the forthcoming world economic conference. He declared:

"Our first concern must be to restore prosperity within our own borders and to build up the consuming capacity of our own people. If we in America can do that by means of our tariff and you can do the same thing for Britain by your agreements at Ottawa, then let us wish each other well and enter upon a friendly race to see which can do the most for our own people, knowing that in each country increased prosperity must inevitably have a favorable effect on the other and on the rest of the world also.

"The present economic crisis is in part the price we pay for the war, and it would seem a sufficiently compelling reason apart from the other horrors of war why we should organize ourselves for peace and determine that no nation on whatever account shall be allowed to disturb the peace of the world."

Ab Sought as Witness Against Libby Holman

MR. AND MRS. SMITH REYNOLDS . . PICTURED ONCE TOGETHER

Case to Be Shelved Until Youth 'Tells All'

By JOSEPH COWAN
International News Service.

WINSTON-SALEM N. C., Oct. 20.—Libby Holman's demand for exoneration by a jury trial will, in all likelihood, be denied, it appeared today. Indications now are that the state will nolle prosse the present proceedings and continue its search for murder evidence.

Carlisle Higgins, the state solicitor, insists he has not as yet decided on what course he will take, but there is good reason to believe that he will accept the suggestion of the Reynolds family that the indictment be shelved.

Every effort will then be made to get Ab Walker to tell the whole story of what happened that night at Reynolda, if there really be any more to tell. If evidence is given to the state by Ab, then the first degree murder indictment against Libby will be revived and he will take the stand for the prosecution.

If the state were forced to go to trial with the case as it stands now, it seems that Libby would certainly be turned free and she would have every legal claim, on behalf of her expected baby, to its share in the $15,000,000 estate that Smith would have inherited from his father's trust had he lived to be 28, it was claimed.

13 STOPS LISTED FOR HOOVER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—President Hoover today prepared for a swift, strenuous, westward trip this week end.

Thirteen times as his special train speeds Saturday through West Virginia and Ohio, he will make rear platform appearances. The climax will be reached when he speaks at Detroit, beginning at 8:30 p. m. Saturday. His subject has not been announced.

A short speech probably will be delivered in Charleston, W. Va., where the train stops half an hour early Saturday after the night's run from the capital.

Following in order are 12 rear platform appearances in Huntington and Kenova, W. Va., and Ironton, Portsmouth, Waverley, Chillicothe, Circleville, Columbus, Delaware, Marion, Fostoria and Toledo, all in Ohio.

Schwab Sees Boom In World Accord

LONDON, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Pointing to the "ever-growing inter-relationship of nations," Charles M. Schwab, American steel magnate, told the British Institute of Fuel last night that the world will see a "wider and better founded era of industrial progress" during the next 25 years.

The occasion was the awarding to Schwab of the Melchett Medal of the institute for distinguished achievement in industry.

LET PRESIDENT COMPLETE JOB, FORD URGES

Holds Hoover's Burden Greater Than That Of Lincoln

International News Service.

DETROIT, Oct. 20.—President Hoover, who today is "carrying a greater burden than Abraham Lincoln carried" in a way that "places him beside Lincoln in sacrificial service," should and will be re-elected, Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer, declared in a nation-wide radio broadcast.

Speaking before the microphone from his Dearborn office last night, he said:

"Why bring in a new recruit?"

"Why retard the seasoned leader, especially since President Hoover has already got the massive forces of defense and recovery into action?"

FIRST AIR SPEECH

Ford's country-wide appeal to the people to select Hoover again as their chief executive because the President earned the right to stay on the job by his success "in turning the tide of the depression," was the first political speech Ford delivered on the air. He added:

"I am not saying that Herbert Hoover can work miracles.

"There are no people in this country who know more about the depression than the automobile workers. We have felt the full force of it. I think the men engaged in the automobile industry are as intelligent as any class in the country.

"We automobile workers say: "Herbert Hoover can not work miracles, but he had the opportunity to make some colossal and disastrous mistakes. He was clutched from every side to do panic-stricken things, but Mr. Hoover kept his head when others lost theirs.

RELIEF FELT

"No act of his has been dictated by panic or politics. And the result is we are now beginning to feel the lifting power of his well-thought out program. Every act of the President has been in the interest of unemployment."

As Wilson was permitted to carry out his policies in a crisis which arose during the administration, so Hoover should be selected by the nation to finish the task he began, the motor magnate said, adding:

"The most terrible depression the world has ever known interrupted the President's program to organize the machinery of prosperity."

Ford also asserted the next vital job ahead of the administration was the improvement of the money system. He said:

"I would like to see it done by a man of practical experiences like Mr. Hoover."

ASSAILS CONGRESS

Congress "farmed out the national money system to private hands," he said, although Congress would "never dream" of farming out naval defense, tax collection, or postal service in the same way. He added:

"Congress should take back full control of money and give the United States a public service money system as opposed to a private profit-making system, a money system managed as are our harbors and rivers, for the promotion of the public's business, managed as our postal service is for the service of the people's business, managed as our weather service is, for the protection of the people's business."

In opening his address, Mr. Ford said:

"It is unusual for me to talk politics. I suppose I am like most Americans — we never bother about politics until it means something to us.

HOLDS HOOVER BEST MAN

"Party politics have never meant anything to me, and they mean nothing to me tonight.

"I support the best man for the job.

"If Herbert Hoover were a Democrat, with his record during the last four years, I should have to support him.

"Of course, Herbert Hoover's worst enemy would not have wished his administration to fall on these times. It is curious how Providence turns all our plans. I supported Woodrow Wilson because I expected that he would devote himself to the improvement of the economic machinery of the country. He understood what was wrong with our money system. He wanted to change it. That was his program. But the sudden change of events compelled him to switch all his energies toward war and international problems.

EVENTS BALK PROGRAM

"It was the same with Mr. Hoover. When he was elected he expected to organize the machinery of prosperity. But the sudden turn of events laid upon his shoulders the most terrible depression the world has ever known.

"Woodrow Wilson was allowed to go ahead and carry out his program.

"And for the very same reason Herbert Hoover should be allowed to carry out his program, and I think he will.

"If Mr. Hoover, during his next four years, will give his mind to this matter I think he will completely establish his fame as a great president."

Roosevelt to Send Gift To Triplets Here

Gov. Franklin Delano Roosevelt today plans to see Mrs. Roosevelt to arrange just what should be done about those Pittsburgh triplets, who, one day old, were named Franklin, Dela and Roosevelt.

He learned about them last night—that they were born in the West Penn Hospital to Mrs. Anna Henry, 30, and was asked:

"What are you going to do about it?"

He smiled and answered:

"Why, I'll see Mrs. Roosevelt about it tomorrow.

"And you can say we are deeply honored. I'll write the mother and father a letter, and the triplets, too. We'll send them some token."

Mrs. Curtis Dall, their daughter, is sending a telegram of congratulations and appreciation.

GOULD HEIRESS, EX-WIFE, SHOWS NO GRIEF

Woman Whose Riches He Squandered Won't Attend Funeral

By FREDERIC K. ABBOTT
International News Service.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—A comparative pauper, and unmourned by the American heiress whose millions made him the most notorious spendthrift of the "Gay Nineties," the Marquis Boni De Castellane died today at the age of 64, after a long illness. He had suffered a paralytic stroke.

Immediate members of his family were at the bedside, but a conspicuous absentee was the Duchess De Talleyrand, who as Anna Gould married "Boni" in 1895 and thereby launched the boulevardier on an 11-year spending spree which won him notoriety throughout the world.

SHOWS NO EMOTION

She said without emotion when told that "Boni" had passed away:

"Oh, did he?"

The duchess was asked if she would attend the funeral. She said:

"Heavens, no! I don't want to be mixed up in that affair at all. My souvenirs of that experience are too unhappy to permit me to attend."

"Are you sending flowers?"

"I don't want to seem hard-hearted, but I'm afraid I can't even do that."

In his heydey, the Count was master of millions and possessor of mansions and luxurious yachts. But when the end came, he had hardly more to his name than the few heirlooms with which he launched a matrimonial campaign culminating in marriage with one of America's wealthiest heiresses.

A modern Beau Brummel, suave, sophisticated and aristocratic in bearing, "Boni" went to America in the latter part of the nineteenth century boasting of his penury and promising to come back to France with a "dollar princess."

WEDS ANNA GOULD

He had hardly landed in New York before he met and fascinated the most conspicuous heiress in sight, the daughter of Jay Gould, multi-millionaire railroad magnate. They were married on March 4, 1895, the ceremony being one of the most important social functions in many a year.

At the time of the marriage, the new Countess de Castellane was reported to have received a dowry of $30,000,000. The income from this huge sum was supposed to support the couple in ease and luxury, but before much time had passed, "Boni's" extravagances were reported to have cut deeply into the fortune.

The marriage came to an abrupt end in 1906, when the Countess obtained a divorce. Soon after, she married "Boni's" cousin, the Duke de Talleyrand.

Suddenly deprived of his princely income, "Boni" lived for a while by writing magazine and newspaper articles on "The Art of Being Poor," and his reputation as an art and antique authority enabled him to earn a good income as "contact man" between art dealers and wealthy Americans.

DEFEND PASTOR IN POISON CASE

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Testimony that the first wife of the Rev. S. A. Berrie died of natural causes from an affliction possessing reactions "in many ways similar" to those resulting from poison was given in the minister's murder trial today by Dr. W. W. Osgood, who attended Mrs. Berrie at the time of her death last spring.

Dr. Osgood appeared as a defense witness for Mr. Berrie, accused by the state of having poisoned his first wife two months before he married Ida Bess Bright, pretty 19-year-old Sunday School teacher in his church.

Dr. Osgood denied he stated at a previous hearing he thought the pastor's wife was suffering from acute nephritis.

C. O. Lescher, undertaker, testified that the defendant appeared "heart broken" at his wife's funeral.

Davis, Sales Head Of Bridge Firm, Dies

Arthur L. Davis, vice president and sales manager of the American Bridge Company, died late yesterday in Atlantic City following a heart attack, according to word received today at the convention of the American Institute of Steel Construction, being held in the Schenley Hotel.

Weather Conditions.

The disturbance that produced the heavy snowfall over the northwestern states the past few days is now centered north of Lake Superior. The weather is cloudy over the lake region as a result of the storm, but there is no precipitation reported except snowing at Duluth. Over the plains states, the Ohio Valley states and southward the skies are clear. Cold weather continues over the Rocky Mountain states and the plains states and the cold is now spreading eastward to the Mississippi Valley. At Lander, Wyom., the temperature was six degrees this morning and at Spencan 10. The cold weather is a result of high pressure, which now covers practically all of the country from the Lower Ohio Valley states westward.

Women Flee Home Damaged by Fire

Mrs. Edwin P. Griffiths and her mother, Mrs. C. A. Moore, fled from their home, 425 Locust street, Edgewood, when it was damaged by fire.

Fire Chiefs John Dyer, Edgewood, and William Thompson Wilkinsburg, said the fire started from a boiler on the second floor, heated by a gasoline flame.

Mr. Griffiths, of the legal department of the Philadelphia Company, said the damage would be at least $10,000.

ROOSEVELT'S ADDRESS HERE DISCUSSED BY HOOVER AND MILLS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Striving to complete his campaign speech to be made at Detroit Saturday night, President Hoover today abandoned his office in favor of the secluded Lincoln study of the White House.

There he received Secretary Mills and several other callers. The Treasury chieftain, saying he had discussed not only the President's coming address, but the speech of Franklin D. Roosevelt last night at Pittsburgh, asserted of the latter's talk:

"It was like his Topeka farm speech and other great mystery stories."

Earlier, too, Mills told newspapermen he would answer Roosevelt's statement last night concerning the bonus and the administration's fiscal policy in an address next Tuesday night in Cincinnati, "provided I can wait that long."

STATE CHIEFS' VIEWS

HARRISBURG, Oct. 20—(INS.)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's address last night in Pittsburgh today drew from political leaders here expressions of conflicting opinion—skepticism on the one side, renewed confidence on the other.

Gen. Edward Martin, Republican state chairman, questioned the sincerity of the Democratic nominee's stand regarding payment of the bonus. Payment of the bonus at a time when there is a "cash surplus" of an unnamed amount in the United States Treasury, Martin said, is "very indefinite."

Warren Van Dyke, Democratic state chairman, asserted that Gov. Roosevelt's speech will forestall any possible reflection of votes resulting from Republican "fear psychology." He said:

"Gov. Roosevelt's speech will hold the thousands of votes already assured him for the presidency despite the efforts of Republican leaders to instill fear into the hearts of voters."

Gen. Martin's reaction was:

"Gov. Roosevelt has evaded, twisted and turned on so many public questions, including the bonus, that I am convinced the thinking voters are not being fooled by him. To my mind the Pittsburgh speech, as well as many former addresses, are making Republican votes."

The Republican chairman would not say what effect, if any, the speech will have on the "substantial majority" which he repeatedly has forecast for President Hoover.

'DODGER," SAYS HURLEY

OMAHA, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley today said Gov. Roosevelt was "dodging the issue" and resorting to "flagrant misrepresentation" in his presidential campaign speech at Pittsburgh last night.

Discussing the Democratic nominee's governmental economy program in an interview before starting for Chicago, Secretary Hurley cited points on which, he said, Roosevelt "failed" to declare himself. Hurley said:

"His Pittsburgh speech on economy convicts him of political cowardice."

Hurley added that Roosevelt's discussion of governmental expenditures "was another example of the evasion which has characterized all his campaign speeches. He was afraid to meet the issue squarely for fear of offending various groups."

Hurley said that Roosevelt, in emphasizing the increase in the cost of government in recent years, "was guilty of flagrant misrepresentation by failing to explain that a large part of the increase was due to extraordinary, non-recurring emergency items in connection with depressed conditions in industry and agriculture."

ROOSEVELT LASHES FOES

CHARGES G. O. P. USES GOSPEL OF FEAR

It is fitting that I should choose Pittsburgh to sound a solemn note of warning addressed not only to the Republican leaders but to the rank and file of American voters of all parties. There are some prices too high for the country to pay for the propaganda spread abroad in a presidential election.

That is true when as now the Republican campaign management is guilty of spreading the gospel of fear.

That is true when in a desperate, futile, last-minute effort to dam the tide of popular disapproval that is steadily growing against the administration, they become alarmists and panic breeders.

This policy of seeking to win by fear of ruin is selfish in its motive, brutal in its method and false in its premise. It is a policy that will be resented as such by men and women of all parties in every section of the land on November 8.

It is an insult to the intelligence of the voter to think that he or she can be fooled by shifting the boast of the full dinner pail made in 1928 to the threat of the continued empty dinner pail in 1932.

Calms G. O. P. Fears

I assure the badly advised and fear-stricken leaders of the Republican party that Democrats and those of the rank and file of their own party who are properly dissatisfied with their leadership, are still American patriots and cherish in their hearts, as I do, the safety of the country, the welfare of its people and the continuance of our institutions.

So much for the note of warning.

What is the normal and sensible thing to do when your neighbor gets excited and starts calling you and your friends bad names over the back fence? Nothing is gained by calling him worse names or by losing one's temper. The peace of the community is best served by sitting down and quietly discussing the problems without raising one's voice. That is why I decline to answer interpretation by vituperation.

One of these problems—and a very vital one to my family and your family and the whole community, is the financial problem of making both ends meet.

I want to discuss this problem with you tonight fully. To do so sincerely I must tell the facts as they are and conceal nothing from you. It is not a pretty picture, but if we know it and face it we have nothing to fear.

Leadership Lacking

This country is the richest and most resourceful nation in the world. It can and will meet successfully every problem which it faces, but it can do so only through intelligent leadership working unselfishly for the good of all people. That it has not had such leadership in its financial affairs will become obvious from the facts I shall relate to you tonight.

We all know that our own family credit depends in large part on the stability of the credit of the United States. And here at least is one field in which all business, big business and little business and family business and the individual's business, is at the mercy of our big government down in Washington.

Now, it is undoubtedly true that the mind of the average individual, man and woman, has been unable to keep pace in the past 10 to 12 years with the intricacies of federal financing.

In the first place, what used to be analagous to an old-fashioned account book that all the family could understand, has become in Washington a maze of intricate double-entry bookkeeping which only a few highly-trained technical expert accountants could possibly understand.

Like Family's Credit

What I should like to do is to reduce, in so far as possible, the problem of our national finances to the terms of a family budget.

Now the credit of the family depends chiefly on whether that family is living within its income. And this is so of the nation. If the nation is living within its income, its credit is good. If in some crisis it lives beyond its income for a year or two, it can usually borrow temporarily on reasonable terms. But if, like a spendthrift, it throws discretion to the winds, and continues to pile up deficits, it is on the road to bankruptcy.

For over two years our federal government has experienced unprecedented deficits, in spite of increased taxes. We must not forget that there are three separate governmental spending and taxing agencies in the United States—national, state and local.

Because the apparent national income seemed to have spiralled upward from about $35,000,000,000 a year in 1913, to about $90,000,000,000 in 1928, all three of our governmental units became reckless and the total spending in all three classes rose in the same period from about $3,000,000,000 to nearly $13,000,000,000, or from 8½ per cent of income to 14½ per cent of income.

But even then we did not greatly worry. We thought we were getting rich.

It was all very merry while it lasted, but when the crash came, we were shocked to find that while income dropped away governmental expense did not, with the result that it is estimated that in 1932 our national income will not much exceed $45,000,000,000, while our total cost of government will likely be considerably in excess of $15,000,000,000. This simply means that one-third — 33 1-3 per cent—of the entire income of our people must go for the luxury of being governed.

Blocks Trade Recovery

That is an impossible economic condition. Quite apart from every man's own tax assessment, that burden is a brake on any return to normal business activity. Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors because they are a burden on production and can be paid only by production. If excessive, they are reflected in idle factories, tax-sold farms, and hence in hordes of the hungry tramping the streets and seeking jobs in vain. Our workers may never see a tax bill, but they pay in deductions from wages, in increased cost of what they buy, or (as now) in broad cessation of employment.

If men or women or children are starving in the United States, I regard it as a positive duty of government to raise by taxes whatever sum may be necessary to keep them from starvation.

What I am talking about are the taxes which go to the ordinary costs of conducting government and that is where the question of extravagance comes in. There can be no extravagance when starvation is in question; but extravagance does apply to the mounting budget of the federal government during these past four years.

The most obvious effect of extravagant government spending is, then, its burden on farm and industrial activity and, for that, nearly every government unit in the United States is to blame. But when we come to consider prodigality and extravagance in the federal government—as distinguished from state or local government—we are talking about something even more dangerous. For upon the financial stability of the United States government depends the stability of trade and employment, and of the entire banking, saving and insurance system of the country.

To make things clear I must go back to 1929.

Joker In 'Economy'

Many people have believed the story which has been painstakingly circulated by this administration that the routine spending of our federal government has been kept on a fairly even keel during these past five years. It was perhaps easy to give this impression because the total outlay each year up to the emergency appropriations of this year did not increase alarmingly.

But the joker in this is that total outlay includes interest and sinking fund on the public debt—a fixed charge which was declining during the days of national debt reduction and lower interest rates thereon. On the plain question of frugality of management, if we want to compare routine government outlay of 1927 with that for 1931, for example, we must subtract this so-called "debt service charge" from the total budget for both years.

If we do this, we find that the expenditure for the business of government in 1927 was $2,187,000,000, and in 1931, $3,168,000,000. That represents an increase of actual administrative spending in those four years of approximately $1,000,000,000, or roughly 50 per cent, and that, I may add, is the most reckless and extravagant pace I have been able to discover in the statistical record of any peace-time government anywhere, any time.

It is an ultimate fact which is the exact reverse of the thing announced as fact by Republican leaders.

Let me repeat those figures so that the whole country can get them clearly in mind. Leaving out debt service charges in both instances, the cost of carrying on the government's business was $2,187,000,000 in 1927, and $3,168,000,000 in 1931, an increase in four years of $1,000,000,000!

On the income side of the budget, the record is worse. Unlike other taxing agencies, the federal government does not levy a direct tax on property.

Therefore, when anything happens that violently contracts sales and incomes and the prices of securities and commodities, there is sure to be a similar violent contraction of federal income and a government charged with maintaining the financial stability of the United States under all conditions is under a very solemn duty to take immediate steps to avoid a deficit.

Although six weeks had elapsed since the worst economic crash in history, the Federal budget of December, 1929, did not even refer to it. It estimated receipts for the year ending June 30, 1931, at $4,200,000,000, actually more than they had been in the preceding year of economic fantasy — a figure which obviously could not possibly be attained without immediate return to the exaggerated speculations of 1929.

The administration advised no economy. On the contrary, it proposed a reduction of taxes and it blandly remarked:

"Our finances are in sound condition . . . Our estimated expenditures . . . are well within our expected receipts."

Against those estimated receipts placed at $4,200,000,000 by Secretary Mellon, the sad fact is that actual revenue turned out to be $3,300,000,000—$900,000,000 less than the estimate, nearly a cool billion of overestimating.

Catastrophe Looms

I recite the 1929 federal incident to clarify what happened at Washington in 1930 and 1931. In December, 1930, a new budget appeared. Vast declines in every form of business activity were now crystallized and certain. The national income was in a nose-dive, and it was therefore certain that federal income was on the verge of a catastrophe. But that new budget of December, 1930, recommended neither increased taxes, nor decreased expenditure, although, upon that recommendation depended the credit standing of this country.

The budget message of the President asserted that the deficit for 1931 would be only $180,000,000, and contained the statements: "Nor do I look with great concern upon this moderate deficit," and, "Our government finances are in a sound condition."

A surplus of $30,000,000 was estimated for 1932; that is to say, the net deficit for the two years together was estimated at $150,000,000. Now at this time the President and the Secretary of the Treasury had plenty of experience with falling tax receipts.

No such results as those estimated could have been achieved without an immediate and complete business recovery from the practical paralysis then existing. In other words, this 1930 budget cannot fairly be called an estimate at all. It was an extreme hazard on the hope of an economic miracle, a gamble with your money and mine.

There is something much more than mere error in this kind of thing. Our people and the world are entitled to reasonable accuracy and reasonable prudence, and above all they are entitled to complete frankness.

Deficit Forecast Wrong

Remember these simple facts. On December 3, 1930, the administration of President Hoover estimated that on the following June 30 the government would have a total deficit of $180,000,000, but that during the following fiscal year, in other words, on June 30, 1932, it would have had a profit of $30,000,000, thus reducing the total deficit by June 30, 1932, to $150,000,000.

Now, I am going to give you a real shock. Instead of the estimated deficit of $150,000,000, the deficit on June 30, 1932, for the two fiscal years was three and three-quarters billion dollars.

No, I fear we cannot call this budget an estimate—nor even a fair gamble. I don't know what to call this kind of representation of that kind of fact, but the name certainly is not candor.

The year 1931 proved to be the worst year yet experienced in the depression. For my distinguished opponent it was the year when all his distinctive 1928 economic heresies seemed to come home to roost together.

Let us call the roll of them.

(1) The loans to "backward and crippled countries," which he said would provide uninterrupted employment and industrial activity by expanding our export trade no longer could be made.

(2) Retaliation against his monstrous Grundy tariff, against which the best economic and industrial thought in the country had stood in almost unanimous protest, had begun to strangle world trade, including our own.

(3) Debtor nations, no longer sustained by our improvident loans and no longer able to export goods, were drained of gold for debts and, one by one, were forced to abandon specie payments.

(4) As a direct result of all these influences, our export markets dried up, our commodity prices slumped and our domestic business was declining at a more rapid rate than business in some of the backward and crippled countries. Unemployment also began to rise here in even greater proportions than in Europe. To top this came the complete collapse of the 1929 and 1930 administration fiscal policy.

Truth Revealed

The truth about the shattering effect of all these heresies began to leak out as the summer of 1931 advanced.

The result of such a combination of disquieting revelations was inevitable. The very basis of confidence in our economic and financial structure both here and abroad was impaired. A fresh wave of liquidation ensued. Foreigners took gold back until a cool billion had been drawn from our reserves. It was the stygain climax to the black business year of 1931.

Our opponents have now become almost frantic in their insistence that this entire sequence originated abroad—that no American policy was in the least to blame. The "foreign cause" alibi is like ascribing measles to its spots rather than to its characteristic germs.

No, we need not look abroad for scapegoats. We had ventured into the economic stratosphere on the wings of Mr. Hoover's novel, radical and unorthodox economic theories of 1928, the complete collapse of which broughtthe real crash in 1931. The Grundy Tariff accentuated the drop.

Indicts Administration

I want to say, with all sincerity, that I recite this record with reluctance. No man with a spark of humanity can fail to sympathize with our responsible leaders in hours of crisis. Politics or no politics, I pay my tribute to the devotion of the President. It is not true to say that he has not been unremitting in his efforts, and I, for one, have never heard it said.

But I do indict his administration for wrong action, for delayed action, and for lack of frankness and courage. Before the administration partisans complain of this arraignment, they must remember that the American people are now about to exercise their democratic right of self-determination of their own fate and future. They must make a choice.

The administration's appeal for sympathy is not based on any frank acknowledgment of the failure of the policies so clearly portrayed by these tragic events. It is, on the contrary, a denial that these principles have failed.

The autumn of 1931 witnessed the complete wreckage of the administration program to that date, the collapse of its entire economic philosophy.

The convening of the Seventy-second Congress last December marked a new phase. The President appeared with his December, 1931, budget message. That was a fateful moment. That was the time for an honest demonstration to the world that might have set the whole world trend of economic events in an upward direction or at least checked the decline.

Only Truth Necessary

All that it was necessary to do was finally to end the two years of vacillation and secretiveness, to tell the truth to the Congress of the United States, to rely on it to balance the budget and establish American credit in the eyes of all the world.

This administration specifically acknowledged the necessity for that. It said it was going to balance the budget. Then it said it was balancing the budget, and finally, it said it had balanced the budget and now, months later, it insists that because it has balanced the budget, it has saved the Gibraltar of world stability and prevented the overthrow of our form of government.

If all this is true the administration has done well. If it is not true, then the administration stands convicted of a new and fatal trifling with the welfare of our people and the credit of our country.

I now quote from the daily Treasury statement at the end of the first quarter of the current fiscal year, made three weeks ago, on September 30, 1932:

Greater Deficit Looms

For the corresponding quarter of last year the deficit was only $380,495,584, but at the end of the year it was $2,885,000,000. There is therefore strong indication that we are in for another staggering deficit. If the present rate continues, the true deficit as of June 30, next year will be over $1,600,000,000, not as large as it was in the unprecedented fiscal year of 1932, but so great that it makes us catch our breath.

I regret to say that the appeal of this administration for applause for its soundness and courage last winter is simply not based on facts. The budget is not balanced, and the whole job must be done over again in the next session of Congress.

Who is to blame for this new blunder?

I cannot answer that question better than to refer you to the dispassionate review of the last session of Congress made last Friday by my running mate, the Speaker of the House, John Garner.

No one who will take the trouble to read that speech will doubt that the patriotic determination of a willing Congress to balance this budget at any cost was frustrated by the same kind of concealment and vacillation that produced the staggering deficits of the years ending June 30, 1931 and 1932.

It is very clear that, under repeated insistence that the budget was being balanced, Congress gave our Treasury, without hesitation or limit, every cent of revenue it asked for and that, at the end, the administration assured Congress and the country that the task had been accomplished.

It is not seemly to conjecture motives, but I think it is fair to say of the whole record of administration policy in the last four years reveals that it has been afraid to trust the people of the United States with the true facts about their affairs. That is a fundamental error which shows unfamiliarity with the true basis of American character.

While the President claims that he did finally recommend new taxes, I fear that this courage came two years too late, and in far too scanty measure. It explains "prosperity around the corner." It explains two complete concealments of deficits and the insufficiency of the action taken last winter. It is an error of weakness and an error which I assure you I shall not make.

Our federal extravagance and improvidence bears a double evil: first, our people and our business cannot carry its excessive burdens of taxation; second, our credit structure is impaired by the orthodox federal financing made necessary by the unprecedented magnitude of these deficits. The latter is the more technical, but to my mind the more immediately dangerous evil.

Impaired Business Credit

Instead of financing the billion-dollar deficit of 1931 in the regular way, our government simply absorbed that much of the lending capacity of banks and by so much impaired the credit available for business. In that year the amount of government obligations held by our

'KID' ILL, GETS JAIL HOLIDAY

John Duffy, the "Wheeling Kid," a government prisoner in the Erie County jail, will be permitted to leave the jail in custody of county authorities to receive medical treatment, under an order signed yesterday by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson, who last week sentenced Duffy to serve four months for failing to file income tax returns and for evasion of taxes.

The order was made on a petition accompanied by a letter from an Erie physician, who said Duffy required attention which could not be given in jail.

Railroads Fight Butler Truck Line

William A. Winters, Butler, whose application for permission to haul motor freight between Pittsburgh and Butler was heard by Examiner Garfield Phillips, of the Public Service Commission, brought protests from other carriers. He was opposed by the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio railroads, Harmony Bus Line, Mathers Express and the Railway Express Company, the protestants claiming the service proposed by Winters is not necessary.

MEMBER DRIVE PUSHED BY 'Y'

Workers in the Pittsburgh Y. M. C. A. membership campaign are putting forth their most strenuous efforts to reach their desired quota by tomorrow night. So far only one branch, Center Avenue, has attained its goal, having enrolled 275 new members over the required total.

The Downtown branch is about that many members behind, but has many promised, leaders said. With an "all-American" recruiting eleven to be chosen tomorrow night, they are confident of success.

Allegheny's final report is also due tomorrow night. Hilltop will continue until Monday.

Boroughs Oppose Bus Line Petition

Protests against the application of the Penn Bus Company for permission to temporarily discontinue operation of motor vehicles between Carnegie and Midway was filed before Public Service Commissioner Samuel Walker yesterday.

Officers testified the company has been operating at a loss. Protestants included residents of Midway and McDonald.

for 100-pound sacks

When it's time to think about potatoes for winter, we investigate all sources: north, south, east and west. Potatoes are brought into our store from each section and tested for cooking quality. Our experience accumulated through the years in selecting and selling potatoes helps us decide on those McCanns can offer as good winter keepers. We could have purchased cheaper potatoes this year, but price never is the determining factor at McCanns. Quality comes first. We recommend our potatoes as good winter keepers and guarantee that our customers will be satisfied.

UTILITY GREED DENOUNCED BY PINCHOT

HARRISBURG, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot today asserted that "the short-sighted greed of so many utilities, principally those selling electric power and light," has changed the functions of public service commissions from a court of arbitration to a protector of the public.

He made this statement in a letter to Dr. F. Herbert Snow, of Harrisburg, which was prepared for reading at the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Water Works Association in Atlantic City today.

The Governor referred to his disclosures of last summer that the late William D. B. Ainey, former chairman of the Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania, permitted utility officials to pay his hospital bills and do other favors for him. This disclosure has resulted in a State Senate committee investigation of the Public Service Commission. This inquiry opens tomorrow.

Referring to "the malpractices of utilities," the Governor said he calls such actions "shortsighted." He asserted that the greatest asset any public service company can have is a satsfied consumer. No amount of fictitious "good will" written up in company books can compensate for customer dissatisfaction, he continued.

Pinchot said satisfied consumers and decent rates are the strongest argument against public ownership of utilities, "which is the thing most feared by every private utility in the United States today." He added:

"There are honest men in the utility field and there are some very dishonest ones. It is up to the honest ones to join with me in my fight to eliminate the sort of dishonest and greedy utility management which has brought disrepute to all private utilities, good and bad alike.

"The public demands, and will eventually achieve, decent service at reasonable rates. The public demands the real facts with regard to the cost of utility property and operation. The public demands a square deal from the utilities. And the public ought to get it."

Saint Now Need, Not 5c Cigar, Dimnet Says

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(INS.)—What this country needs today is not a five-cent cigar so much as a national saint, declared Canon Ernest Dimnet, priest and scholar, here to make a lecture tour. He said:

"A leader with the magnetic influence of Gandhi would carry everything before him because of his humanitarianism.

"Were there a number of such men here, this question of poverty and misery would be automatically wiped out."

Married to Cousin, Asks Annulment

BUTLER, Pa., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Mrs. Gertrude A. Nixon has asked that her marriage to Samuel W. Nixon be annulled on the grounds that they are first cousins.

She "just discovered" the relationship, Mrs. Nixon told the court, adding that she and Nixon were married on September 15, 1931, at Wellsburg, W. Va.

WRIGLEY DOLLAR SUPPLY NOT SHORT

Wrigley Users Everywhere, Waiting for Dollars.

By MISS MINT

Onward, Wrigley Dollars—onward every day. This might be the theme song of those crackly, new dollar bills that I'm giving away day by day. The supply simply knows no bounds—they seem "inexhaustible." I go along from shop to shop, street to street, office to office, ever in quest of Wrigley users. I get 'most as big a thrill giving those dollars to folks, as they get receiving them.

Mrs. J. D. GORMLEY, 1012 Norwich Avenue, had her pet Pomeranian, Buster, out for a stroll when I stopped her. She had a stick or two of Spearmint remaining in her package, and was very surprised to encounter me. Mrs. Gormley had forgotten that I was still in the city, but she was using Wrigley's, the same as ever. "Wrigley's in the new cellophane package is very delicious and refreshing," stated Mrs. Gormley.

Here are a few of the many who received dollars yesterday: F. L. COLEMAN, 208 Sixth Ave.; LEE McGOVERN, 554 Washington Ave.; GEO. KEARNS, 619 Arch St.; VIRGINIA M. ALM, 326 Brookline Blvd.; J. G. CONLEY, 233 W. Main St.; MRS. J. A. RENN, 213 Third St.; WM. H. BYRNE JR., 814 Brookline Blvd.; MRS. A. E. DUFFETT, 2714 Queensboro Ave.

Get your package of Wrigley's today—and be ready with it when I approach you. Those Wrigley Dollars aren't at all hard to take.

You know as well as I that this administration's claims that it has provided credit for industry and agriculture by pouring credit into banks are not frank. Commercial credit has continuously contracted and is contracting now. Most of this new government-created credit has been taken to finance the government's continuing deficits. The truth is that our banks are financing these stupendous deficits and that the burden is absorbing their resources.

All this is highly undesirable and wholly unnecessary. It arises from one cause only, and that is the unbalanced budget and the continued failure of this administration to take effective steps to balance it. If that budget had been fully and honestly balanced in 1930, as it could have been, some of the 1931 collapse would have been avoided.

Now how can we continue to countenance such a condition? Can an administration which has so frequently failed in a matter so directly touching your own responsibilities ask for your support and trifle with your common sense by these campaign alibis about mysterious foreign forces and this specious talk about sound fiscal policies and administration?

Would it not be infinitely better to clear this whole subject of obscurity, to present the facts squarely to the Congress and the people of the United States and secure the one sound foundation of permanent economic recovery, a complete and honest balance of the federal budget?

The other bad effect of this fiscal mismanagement is not at all technical. It is the burden of high cost on the backs of all our people. I can state that condition best by quoting one paragraph from a document published a week ago and signed by both Alfred E. Smith and Calvin Coolidge:

"All the costs of local, state and national government must be reduced without fear and without favor. Unless the people, through unified action, arise and take charge of their government they will find that their government has taken charge of them. Independence and liberty will be gone and the general public will find itself in a condition of servitude to an aggregation of organized and selfish minorities."

Every word of that warning is true, and the first and most important and necessitous step in balancing our federal budget is to reduce expense.

Perhaps we can get some glimpse of the President's underlying idea about the federal government from his 1928 speeches. He proposed, you remember, "a new thing in government." He says he "reorganized the Department of Commerce on a greater scale than has ever been attempted or achieved by any government in the world."

In his book, The New Day, he says:

"A nation which is spending $90,000,000,000 a year can well afford a few hundred million for a workable program."

The Department of Commerce went through even the heavy war strain on about 13 million a year. When Mr. Hoover left it, it was spending 39 millions, and for 1933 it estimated it will spend 43 millions. It is now housed in what is facetiously called in Washington the "Temple of Fact Finding," which cost the people considerably more than the Capitol of the United States.

May Explain Overhead

That record may explain the 50 per cent increase in government overhead in four years, 1927-1931, and I am sure that the whole group of quotations reveal why you can never expect any important economy from this Administration. It is committed to the idea that we ought to center control of everything in Washington as rapidly as possible.

That was the idea that increased government cost by a billion in four years. Now, ever since the days of Thomas Jefferson, that has been the exact reverse of the Democratic concept—which is to permit Washington to take from the States nothing more than is necessary to keep abreast of the march of our changing economic situation.

In the latter philosophy and not in the philosophy of Mr. Hoover, which, I think, is responsible for so much of our trouble, I shall approach the problem of carrying out the plain precept of our party, which is to reduce the cost of the current Federal government operations by 25 per cent.

Would Require Pledges

Now I am going to disclose to you a definite personal conclusion which I adopted the day after I was nominated in Chicago. Here it is:

Before any man enters my cabinet he must give me a two-fold pledge of—

1. Absolute loyalty to the Democratic platform and especially to its economy plank.

2. Complete co-operation with me, looking to economy and reorganization in his department.

I regard reduction in federal spending as one of the most important issues of this campaign. In my opinion it is the most direct and effective contribution that government can make to business.

In accordance with this fundamental policy it is equally necessary to eliminate from federal budget-making during this emergency all new items except such as relate to direct relief of unemployment.

As a part of this phase of the problem I note that former President Coolidge is reported as having said in a speech in New York City:

"An early and timely word from the Democratic candidate for President that he would reject the proposal to increase the national debt by $2,300,000,000 to pay a bonus would have been a great encouragement to business, reduced unemployment and guaranteed the integrity of the national credit. While he remained silent economic recovery was measurably impeded."

Bonus Stand Well Known

That charge is baseless and absurd, for the reason that last April my views on the subject were widely published and have been subsequently frequently quoted. I said:

"I do not see how, as a matter of practical sense, a government running behind $2,000,000,000 annually can consider the anticipation of bonus payment until it has a balanced budget, not only on paper but with a surplus of cash in the treasury."

No one, for political purposes or otherwise, has the right in the absence of explicit statement from me to assume that my views have changed. They have not.

I have sought to make two things clear: First, that we can make savings by reorganization of existing departments, by eliminating functions, by abolishing many of the innumerable boards and commissions which have grown up. These savings can properly be made to total many hundreds of millions of dollars a year.

Sees Revenue From Beer

Secondly, I hope that it will not be necessary to increase the present scale of taxes, and I call definite attention to the fact that as soon as the Democratic platform pledge is enacted into legislation modifying the Volstead act, a source of new revenue amounting to several hundred millions of dollars a year will be made available toward the balancing of the budget.

I refer specifically to a federal tax on beer which would be raised through the sale of beer in those states and those states only which by state law allow the sale of beer.

The above two categorical statements are aimed at a definite balancing of the budget. At the same time, if starvation and dire need on the part of any of our citizens make necessary the appropriation of additional funds which would keep the budget out of balance, I shall not hesitate to tell the American people the full truth and recommend to them the expenditure of this additional amount.

A powerful cause contributing to economic disaster has been this inexcusable fiscal administration and the obscurity and uncertainty that has attended and grown out of it. There it remains for all to see—a veritable cancer in the body politic and economic. Is it prophecy to assure you that if we remove this destructive growth we shall move on to better things?

To my mind this is so plain and persuasive as scarcely to be open to argument. As I said in the beginning, this is the one field in which business is wholly in the grip of government.

481,297 LISTED TO VOTE HERE

A total of 481,297 persons in Allegheny County will be eligible to vote at the presidential election next month, Ray C. Dever, chief custodian of the Bureau of Elections announced today. This is 109,860 less than the number that registered last fall in the fight for the office of county commissioner.

However, Dever pointed out, only 293,203 voted at the general election last fall, or less than half of the 534,981 eligible through registration.

In Pittsburgh the total of the three registration days for the presidential election is 167,073.

Of the 481,297 eligible voters in the county, 267,231 are men and 214,066 women. The Republicans have 425,121 enrolled; Democrats, 49,654; Prohibition, 248; and Socialists, 1,456. There are 3,335 registered without a choice of a party, and 1,483 among several miscellaneous parties.

LEAGUE SOUNDS TAX WARNING

A warning against the high cost of government and increasing local state and national taxes has been issued by the Western Pennsylvania Branch of the National Economy League.

Figures complied by the league show each family in the nation is devoting about one-third of its annual income to the support of government. Taxes are paid by everyone, the reports states, regardless of whether an individual receives a tax bill of not. Taxes are passed along to the people in every article or service that they buy, it is stated.

Among the members of the league are Calvin Coolidge, Alfred E. Smith, Elihu Root, Newton D. Baker, Gen. John J. Pershing and Admiral William S. Sims.

A. Rex Flinn is chairman of the local branch; Owen M. Phillips, vice chairman; Earl C. B. Gould, secretary, and Thomas Lynch, treasurer.

Bellevue to Stage Halloween Parade

A Halloween parade, forming at Burnside and Washington avenues, Bellevue, and traversing the principal streets of Bellevue, will be held under the auspices of the Bellevue Board of Trade, October 31. Hundreds are expected to compete for the many prizes offered. The Bellevue High School Band will lead the parade. Later a free dance for the mummers will be held in the Bellevue Borough Hall.

In the Lincoln avenue district, a Halloween fete, sponsored by the Lincoln Avenue Business Men's Association, will get underway in the Lemington School yard at 8 p. m. Prizes will be given. Music will be furnished by a nine-piece band.

PENNA. SWINGS TO PRESIDENT IN POLL

the latest weekly tabulation of ballots in the group of central states, Pennsylvania to Illinois, in the nation-wide postcard presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

Last week it was pointed out President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt had divided exactly even the 23,064 ballots received during the week from the seven states of Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois. This week 23,223 ballots constituted the return from the same group of states. This time Hoover scored a majority of 1,607. He drew 12,-415 and Roosevelt 10,808.

It was Pennsylvania that gave the big boost, though Ohio did quite well for Hoover. Pennsylvania gave him 1,265 majority out of 8,669 new votes, sufficient to overturn Roosevelt's last week's lead of 772 and place the state in the Hoover column by a 493 majority out of a total of 44,055 Pennsylvania poll ballots.

Hoover's pickup in Ohio may be attributed in part at least, to his journey to Cleveland last Saturday. This week's Ohio returns of 4,370 ballots gave Hoover a 530 majority to bring his total majority there to 922 with 21,300 ballots recorded.

Michigan came through this week with an 83 majority for Hoover out of 2,453 new votes. This had the effect of reducing Roosevelt's Michigan lead to 1,085, with 21,435 ballots on record.

Last week Hoover held Roosevelt down to a 51 majority on the week's returns from Illinois. This week he went a step farther by getting a 56 majority for himself out of the 4,820 new Illinois ballots. Roosevelt still appears to have Illinois safely in hand, however, as his majority from that state is 5,249, with 39,009 ballots on the books.

Roosevelt turned the tables on Hoover in Indiana this week by getting a majority of 111 out of 1,927 new ballots. Last week Hoover had claimed a 105 Indiana majority on the week's returns. Indiana still shows a Roosevelt majority of 867 out of 21,387 votes.

Presidential Trend By States

Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States. It also shows the majority that each candidate has in each state in which he is leading. In addition it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each state as compared with the last preceding report from the state. These state reports are usually a week apart. The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each state where he has improved his position as compared with the preceding report from that state.

SMITH PLEADS 'FULL VICTORY'

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Plunging into the heat of the national campaign, Alfred E. Smith last night declared that the "bright star" guiding the nation into a "harbor and haven of repose is complete and full Democratic victory in November."

Cheers echoed in the Tammany wigwam last night as the former Governor made his first speech of the national drive. He said:

"I have been privileged in the past to know that the loyalty, the devotion of the great Democratic organization of this city will be exerted to the last degree in favor of the election of Roosevelt and Garner."

A crowd that jammed the Tammany auditorium laughed and cheered as Smith jibed at the Republicans as taking advantage of the "open season on bunk" and praised the Democratic record.

Re-election of Senator Robert F. Wagner, which he urged as a "necessity," and an indorsement of John P. O'Brien's candidacy for mayor of the city were other highlights in the address. He said he will discuss national issues at Newark, N. J., Monday night.

MILLS REPLIES TO GARNER

BALTIMORE, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Confidence that Maryland will be found in the Republican column in November "as in the last election" was expressed by Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills at a Republican rally here last night.

Replying to last Friday's speech of John N. Garner, Democratic vice presidential nominee, Mills reviewed the economic situation in Europe over a five-month period in 1931, saying the "financial panic" struck New York, threatening this nation's credit structure and monetary system and receiving impetus from the measures in the Democratic House of Representatives. Mills declared:

"The financial panic which began in September, 1931, was due directly to the European collapse."

Garner had said the Republican administration either was ignorant of the financial status of the country during the last session of Congress or deliberately concealed the true state of affairs.

Pittsburgher Flees Rockview Prison

A state-wide search for two convicts, one from Pittsburgh, who escaped yesterday from Rockview Penitentiary by scaling the walls, was in progress today.

The Pittsburgher was Charles McLean, 33, sentenced to from six to 14 years on a forgery charge. The other man, Jack W. Lawson, 30, was sentenced from Erie County for burglary and entering and assault.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets.

Chicago Nurse Loses Fat

40 Pounds Go In 6 Weeks

Now Her Fat Patients Also Take New Battle Creek Reducing Treatment

"It was a lucky day for me when I heard of BonKora. Other remedies had failed to reduce me but BonKora took off 40 lbs. in 6 weeks. I am now the correct weight for my height. I found it harmless too. In fact, it made me feel stronger; ended digestive troubles. I look 10 years younger too.

"I am a Registered Nurse and I always recommend BonKora to my patients if they are stout. Those who have taken it report splendid results, losing fat, gaining health."—Mrs. F. Rudolph, Registered Nurse, 4527 Lake Park Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Francis Rudolph

Safe, Harmless, Pleasant. Eat Big Meals See Fat Go Quick—or No Cost

Trust a trained nurse to recognize the best way to lose her ugly fat. Others also say that BonKora, the new Battle Creek Reducing Treatment, took off fat after other methods failed. They lost 15 to 40 lbs. in 3 to 6 weeks. Mrs. Grace Moram, 2849 Lake St., Kalamazoo, Mich., lost 70 lbs. in 14 weeks—or 5 lbs. a week. Reduced from 210 to 140 lbs. She gained new health too.

Get BonKora from your own druggist today. It reduces fat new "3-stage" way. Triple action; triple speed. Take a little BonKora daily to help body function properly. EAT BIG MEALS of foods you like, as explained in BonKora package. Don't get too thin. Reduce to normal, healthy weight. Then stop reducing and hold your new slender figure.

Don't be fat any longer. Get a bottle of BonKora from druggist today. If not delighted with quick loss of fat, manufacturer refunds money you paid for this bottle. You don't risk a penny!

IF YOU'RE TOO FAT TO TOUCH YOUR TOES YOU NEED TO TAKE BONKORA

Pennsylvanians Praise BonKora

Lost 26 Pounds Quick

"After using first bottle of BonKora I found I had lost 11 pounds. Not wishing to reduce too fast I then lessened the dose and then I lost at the rate of 4 to 5 pounds a week, reducing 26 pounds in all. Mrs. H. Cankins, 1423 Conlyn St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Loses 22 Pounds. Health and Nerves Better

"I have lost 22 pounds taking BonKora. I look so much better and best of all I feel better, too. I had no energy—many headaches, nervous at times, but BonKora just seems to take all that away, too."—Mrs. Jos Sylvester, 601 Center St., Ashland, Pennsylvania.

SPECIAL OCTOBER CLEARANCE TRADE-IN SALE on Firestone NON-SKID TIRES

FISCAL year closes October 31, and we are offering unusual bargains during the month of October.

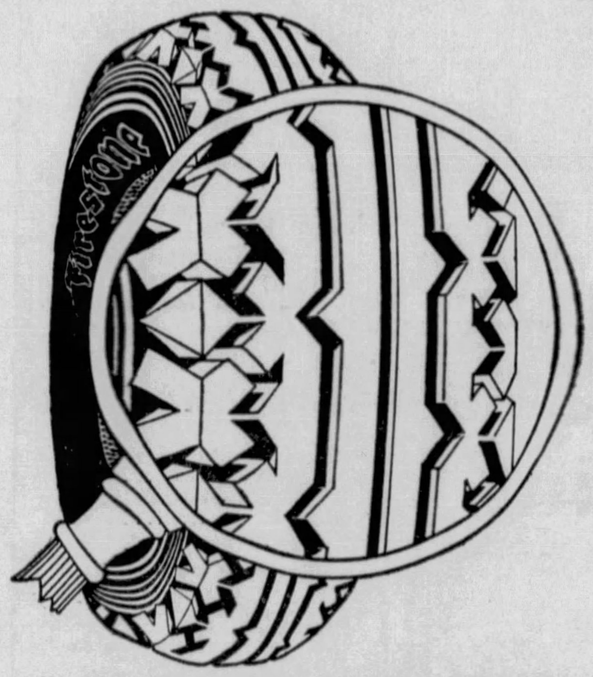
October and November are the dangerous months of the year for driving. Trade in your thin, worn tires for Firestone non-skid tires, used by race drivers because they are the safest tires in the world.

Glen Schultz recently set a new world's record for the Pikes Peak climb, where hair-pin turns were made at high speeds and where a skid or tire failure meant death.

All world's records on road and track, for safety, speed, mileage and endurance are held by Firestone Gum-Dipped Non-Skid tires.

Come in today and exchange your smooth, thin, worn tires for the safest and best tires you can buy.

They cost you no more—besides, in this October Clearance Sale we will give you a liberal allowance on your old tires in exchange for these safe non-skid Firestone tires.



The Firestone tread is designed with angles and projections to give the maximum traction and non-skid. The brakes can stop the wheels, but the tires must stop the car.

REPEAL URGED AT RALLY BY MRS. MILLER

Mrs. Carroll Miller, member of the Democratic National Committee, speaking at the party rally in Forbes Field last night, upheld her reputation for eloquence with a plea for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Comparing the records of the two parties, Mrs. Miller said:

"It is clear that all who oppose repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment or its submission to the people of the states; all those who favor the bribery and intimidation which has stifled the forces of law in our nation; all those who favor fastening for all time upon the federal government supreme control of the liquor traffic, with its crime and corruption, leaving untouched the Volstead Act that has throttled the liberties of the people, should vote for Herbert Hoover.

"On the other hand, those who favor repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, returning the liquor traffic to the states; those who believe that this action will make America free again; all those who favor tearing the shackles of prohibition from the nation and opening the Treasury to abundant streams of revenue, should vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt."

ROOSEVELT BEER, BONUS STAND ACCLAIMED HERE

or otherwise, has the right in the absence of explicit statement from me to assume that my views have changed. They have not. So much for another effort by Republican leaders to preach an unwarranted gospel of fear and panic to the American electorate."

BEER TALK CHEERED

Immediately after stating his position on the bonus the New York Governor touched the prohibition question. Declaring that he had shown many savings in administration were possible, "totalling many hundreds of millions of dollars," he said:

"I call definite attention to the fact that as soon as the Democratic platform pledge is enacted into legislation modifying the Volstead act, a source of new revenue amounting to several hundreds of millions of dollars a year will be made available towards balancing the budget. I refer specifically to a federal tax on beer."

These two coupled statements brought a wave of applause from the stands, the greater burst attending the pronouncement for legalized beer. Bonus champions, at first disappointed that the Democratic candidate had not declared for a bonus payment, appeared conciliated by the hope held out in the subsequent remarks.

There was, however, no definite promise of a future payment, the candidate being first concerned about balancing the budget, something he termed imperative, if there was to be a return to prosperity. Failure to have a balanced budget now he charged to Republican extravagance and mismanagement of the national government.

FINANCIAL POLICIES

Roosevelt picked for the main text of his Pittsburgh speech the fiscal affairs of the federal administration, a subject difficult to dramatize, but discussion of which several times brought the crowd to attention as he directed a drumfire toward what he contended were the faulty fiscal theories of the Hoover administration.

There were boos as he cited some of the charges of mismanagement, but the most marked outburst of the evening came at the very opening of the address, when the candidate attacked the Republican campaign management as "guilty of spreading a gospel of fear."

There were hoots of derision as he linked the names of Henry Ford and Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, as parties to this system of campaigning. Both industrialists within the last few days have advised their employes to vote for President Hoover, intimating there would be more employment in a Republican administration.

RAPS PANIC BREEDERS

Calling attention to present conditions of unemployment under a Republican administration, Roosevelt said:

"There are some prices too high for the country to pay for the propaganda spread abroad in a presidential election. That is true when the Republican campaign management in a desperate, futile, last-minute effort to dam the tide of popular disapproval that is steadily growing against the administration become alarmists and panic breeders. It is a policy which will be resented by men and women of all parties on November 8."

There were other boos when the candidate named former Secretary of the Treasury A. W. Mellon as one who had made inaccurate forecasts of the fiscal condition of the government.

For the most part, however, the speech was received in attentive silence, the candidate, with the exceptions named, refraining from any personal attacks of the nature which usually stir political crowds.

He likened the federal income and expenditure to a family budget. He charged that the administration had not dealt frankly and candidly with the public, misleading it as to the condition of the country. It would have been much safer, he asserted, for Mr. Hoover to have informed Congress and the public of the desperate situation which the President now reveals confronted the country in the approach to the brink of abandoning the gold standard.

WRONG ACTION

There was a tone of sportsmanship when Roosevelt said:

"Politics or no politics, I pay my tribute to the devotion of the President of the United States. It is not true to say that he has not been unremitting in his efforts, and I for one have never heard it said. But I do indict his administration for wrong action, for delayed action and for lack of frankness and courage."

The crowd cheered. Indictments were something a Pittsburgh crowd could understand.

Unemployment, business depression, high taxes and depreciated incomes, the candidate declared, were all attributable to the administration's failure to estimate properly the condition of the country, and for its failure to reduce expenses. The Democrats, Roosevelt said, were pledged to a 25 per cent reduction in federal expenses, and he promised to exact a pledge from every man who enters his cabinet that this reduction shall be made in the federal departments.

The New York Governor was in high good humor at the greeting he received. He injected a serious note, however, in telling the crowd of his visit through Western Pennsylvania and Virginia. He said:

"This has been a day of mingled pleasure and sadness. I have seen thousands upon thousands of my fellow Americans in want. I have seen factories closed and mines closed. No one could go through this experience without feeling more deeply than ever before that our government is on trial, and that we must see our government serves the purpose for which it was created."

The Governor came on to the speaker's stand, situated between the pitcher's mound and second base, to the accompaniment of great bursts of cheering. Noting the location of the stand, he said that when he was in a battle he always liked to know the location of first base and home plate.

GREETED AT FIELD

He appeared unfatigued by the arduous day he had put in campaigning through Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. His smile was as broad as when he alighted from a train in the P. & L. E. station yesterday morning. His son James, with the same wide grin which had been so much in evidence at the Chicago convention, escorted his father up the runway to the speaker's platform.

Both glowed the reception. On the speaker's stand there was a rush to shake the Governor's hand. In the forefront of those to greet him was Father James R. Cox, of Old St. Patrick's Church, himself a presidential candidate until his withdrawal Tuesday and his indorsement of Roosevelt.

Next to greet the Governor was Samuel Harden Church, president of Carnegie Institute, a lifelong Republican affiliated with the conservative wing of the party, who indorsed Roosevelt in a nationwide statement last Sunday. Eddie McCloskey, the boisterous Mayor of Johnstown, pumped the Governor's hand.

Democratic County Chairman David L. Lawrence, who presided at the meeting, quickly cleared the way for the Governor, who was seated at the side of the stand. In a few words Lawrence introduced M. L. Benedum, Pittsburgh oil man, who supported President Hoover in 1928 with a campaign contribution said to have been $100,000, but who this year is actively for Roosevelt. Benedum presented the Governor to the crowd, making a hit with the shortest speech any man ever given a similar opportunity for the spotlight probably ever uttered. He said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, the next President of the United States, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

And the Democratic speech was on from the first Democratic presidential candidate to directly seek the vote of normally Republican Pittsburgh in many years.

MANY DELEGATIONS

There were thousands in the stands who have previously, at least, voted the Republican ticket. But there were Democratic delegations galore, not only from Pittsburgh and Allegheny County, but from Armstrong, Somerset, Beaver, Fayette, Westmoreland and other Western Pennsylvania counties, as well as from Ohio and West Virginia counties touching the Pennsylvania border.

When the Democratic candidate finished his speech the crowd broke from the stands to crowd about his automobile. There were cheers as he came down the runway from the speakers' platform and seated himself in an open car with Lawrence, Benedum, James Roosevelt and Joseph F. Guffey.

With difficulty police opened a lane through which the automobile was backed through one of the field gates to take the New York Governor back downtown.

PLAN CARAVAN FOR THOMAS

Norman Thomas, who will set forth the platform of the Socialist Party in Pittsburgh next Monday as the Socialist presidential candidate, will head a motor caravan through Pittsburgh and the Monongahela valley preceding his evening address in Carnegie Music Hall, Schenley Park.

Socialist leaders in Western Pennsylvania will greet their candidate at 10:30 a. m. in West Park, the starting place of the caravan, according to announcement by the Allegheny County Thomas campaign committee.

Judgment Granted In Air Mail Suit

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 20.—A judgment for $5,766 was granted today by Federal Judge W. E. Baker in a suit of Llewellyn Jordon, of Tokoma Park, Md., against Menter Hetzer, Moundsville, W. Va., business man, and J. Wade Barnett, Clarksburg banker. It was an action involving a $5,000 note given for stock in the Air Mail Apparatus Corporation of America, Inc., by the defendants to the plaintiff.

Man Chases Bandits, Recovers Stolen Food

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Oct. 20.—After being held up at the point of a gun and robbed of considerable groceries by two bandits in his store, I. M. Paterson, local merchant, gave chase to the two holdup men, finally overtaking them. He attacked them, causing the pair to flee and leave him in possession of his groceries. He then informed the police.

Sidelights of Big Rally For Roosevelt Here

"M. L. Benedum is for Roosevelt, so are we."

The banner flared as the parade of 2,000 Negro members of the Associated Roosevelt Clubs moved from the Hill to Oakland last night. It's Allegheny County's first real Negro Democrat group. Two brass bands, red flares added to the glory.

Meyersdale brought a real donkey on a truck. One sign read: "I'm just a baby mule. My name will be Prosperity."

More than 200 carloads of Democrats from Clairton, Elizabeth, Glassport, McKeesport—all ex-veterans—came to town with the Clairton drum and bugle corps.

John Hager was the cheer leader for hundreds of Mt. Oliver and South Hills stalwarts, who brought cowbells and horns to add to the merriment.

John Barett had his Wilkinsburg boys' band there.

Mrs. Curtis Dall and Mrs. James Roosevelt, would have been disappointed if Inspector John Berry hadn't been so gallant. Two cars were scheduled to go onto the field. There were seven in the Roosevelt party. Barry let all seven in.

Pittsburghers are going to be engrossed in still another out-of-town wedding next month. Miriam Clarke Mohler, whose engagement to Walter C. Carroll, Jr., son of the Walter C. Carrolls, of College avenue, was announced just a short time ago, has made her wedding plans.

She'll be married Tuesday, November 1, at 5 o'clock in St. James Chapel, Chicago, with only members of the two families attending.

After their wedding trip Mr. Carroll and his bride will be at home in Chicago. The bride-to-be is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Robbins Mohler, of Washington.

I know Pittsburgh folks are going to be interested in a brand new engagement that comes from the west today. Announcement has been made of the betrothal of Amabel Lee MacClure, daughter of Mrs. Walter Scott Weeks, of Berkeley, Cal., and the late Colbert A. MacClure, of Pittsburgh, to John Eager Howard, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Chew Howard, of Baltimore.

* * *

The politically-minded flocked to Forbes Field last night to hear what Roosevelt had to say, but the gayer, dance-minded including ever so many of the fashionables, couldn't resist attending the opening of Pittsburgh's smart new night club, the Chatterbox, in the William Penn Hotel.

Opened By Deb

And blonde Laura Childs, one of the debutantes of the season, christened the new club. Many of her friends were there to see and hear her make the announcement over the radio of the christening ceremony.

Joseph Urban, the designer of the fascinating decorations, was there with Mrs. Urban, for the event. And he must have been delighted with the many comments about his restrained, modernistic designs and intriguing lighting.

Mr. Urban was with the T. M. Joneses, the III, the Herbert A. Mays and the W. Y. Cockens.

Debs and Escorts

She wore a gown which must have had for its inspiration a monk's robe. It was of sapphire blue velvet, cut high to the throat in front, and tied with a girdle of red velvet, which hung to the hem-line in front. In the back, the bodice had a deep V-decolletage.

Virginia Doyle chose garnet red velvet. Dorothy Blaxter wore a chartreuse green velvet wrap, but I couldn't get a glimpse of her gown, the halls and the dance floor were so crowded.

Quite the smartest costume I saw was that of Mrs. Simon T. Patterson. It was of black pebble crepe, fastened high at the neck with two large silver buttons, and having luxurious bands of white fox fur placed over the shoulders suggesting both the mode for epaulettes and a narrow cape.

Smart Costume

With her was Mrs. Jack Bissell in black crepe and a white bunny jacket. Mrs. Theodore F. Smith was there in black velvet, and Mrs. May, who came with the Urbans, as I've already mentioned, was in white chiffon.

I had a glimpse of Mrs. Alan Humphreys in black chiffon and lace, of Catherine Suydam in black crepe, of young Mrs. David C. Chaplin, and of Mrs. Robert Carson in black chiffon velvet with a scarf of white velvet, sitting in a table near the dance floor.

The post-debs were represented too. Bunny Todd arrived with the Bickfords, Mary Louise and Gretchen, Rita Borntraeger in black velvet, Nancy Doyle in brown crepe with green for accent, and Martha Yost in an attractive gown of black crepe having short puffed sleeves of many narrow ruffles of ice-green chiffon.

Claire Tritsch Is Married to R. D. Bryson

Mr. and Mrs. Adam W. Tritsch, of West Deer Township, formerly of Mt. Washington, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Claire Irene Tritsch, to Robert D. Bryson, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Bryson, which was solemnized Tuesday, by the Rev. John T. Aiken, of the Deer Creek United Presbyterian Church, in the church manse.

The bride wore a traveling costume of brown wool with a matching hat and her matron of honor, Mrs. Walter Hohman, wore blue. Mr. Hohman was the best man.

Mr. Bryson and his bride left on a trip through New York state by motor, and after November 1 will be at home in Deer Creek Church road.

REVIVAL OF CAPES IS A NEW FASHION HIGH SPOT FOR 1933

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 20. — One of the high spots in the new list of Paris fashions for winter is the revival of the cape. Perhaps it should not be called a revival, for these new capes are not much like any that Paris has seen for a long time. They are a new fashion—if any fashion can be really called new—and threaten to replace coats of many types.

PRACTICALLY every fashionable dressmaking house in Paris is showing some type of cape—a coincidence which reflects a feeling that women like capes, have missed wearing them the last few years, and would like to try wearing them again. There are capes of all varieties—sturdy, all-weather affairs of tweed, frilled little things that just cover the shoulders and made of velvet or soft fur, jacket-length capes and dress-length capes, for morning, afternoon and evening wear.

ONE OF THE most successful capes in Paris is Lucien LeLong's evening wrap, done in finger-tip length, of black velvet and ermine. Sometimes it is seen in brown velvet and is worn over a white georgette evening dress. Note how simply it is cut—swinging free from the shoulders, and voluminously full at the hem. Note how the soft folded ermine collar wraps closely around the throat, with the outside end tucked into an immense buttonhole just below the throat line.

* * *

THE PATOU dress, of white corded velvet, shows how the new corded weave is employed to get diagonal lines about the waist and hips. It has another new feature—a higher back decolletage, in square cut.

RUPP ASSAILS TAX REFUNDS TO WEALTHY

Three Republican administrations have returned $4,000,000,000 in cash refunds to the ultra rich and to large corporations, many of those who got the money being big contributors to campaign chests, Lawrence H. Rupp, Democratic candidate for the United States Senate declared in his speech at Forbes Field last night.

Did the campaign contributions have anything to do with these refunds, Rupp demanded.

CITES TAX REFUND

Reading a list of individuals and corporations, their tax refunds and campaign donations, Rupp mentioned the Aluminum Company with a refund of $1,250,000, the Rockefellers with a refund of $8,545,000, and Firestone with a refund of $2,960,000. He said:

"It seems utterly incredible that the individuals and corporations receiving refunds should have made such extraordinary blunders in their bookkeeping, auditing and legal departments as to have caused them voluntarily to pay into the Treasury such large sums in taxes in which errors were discovered by Republican officials at Washington."

Can those who permitted this enormous drain on the Treasury be heard to suggest that the Democrats may loot the Treasury when it is already empty due to the acts of the Republican administration? Rupp inquired.

A roar of approval went up from the crowd as Rupp said:

"What would be the condition of the United States Treasury had this $4,000,000,000 not been returned?"

It was Mr. Mellon and the Republican Congres which in 1924 changed the law to allow a claim to be filed on any tax payment, regardless as to whether or not it was paid under protest, Rupp stated.

PEAK OF EXPENSES

Rupp charged the Hoover administration with failing to be economical. Even the expenditures of the executive office at the White House, under the direct control of the President, reached a peak in 1930 of $724,120, he said.

The Wickersham Commission cost the taxpayers $500,000, and its decision was that Alfred E. Smith was right when he called prohibition a failure, Rupp said. He asked:

"Is there anything to indicate that Mr. Hoover himself took any notice at all of the report of the Wickersham Commission?"

The tariff which has shut America in and the world out has made some extraordinary changes in American wages and standards of living, Rupp said. There has been a migration of industry to Canada, with 1,300 branch factories being erected on Canadian soil, for the most part since 1930, Rupp said.

GRUBBS BACKED FOR BENCH

County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern is in Harrisburg today with Attorney W. Clyde Grubbs, evidently urging the latter's appointment to the Common Pleas Court place left vacant by the resignation of Judge Joseph M. Swearingen.

Grubbs, western campaign manager for Gov. Pinchot in the 1930 primary, was put forward by McGovern for a position on the Public Service Commission but the request of McGovern was denied and Representative C. Jay Goodnough, of Cameron County, was selected.

The visit of McGovern and Grubbs comes on the heels of a similar visit by Judge James H. Gray and Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay. Gray, an old friend of the Governor, asking him to appoint Lindsay. In the judicial primary last year Lindsay received approximately 100,000 votes.

McGovern, it had been reported, was not unfriendly to Lindsay.

Girl Named in Trip With Dresier Weds

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Marie Victoria Troubetskoy, better known as Marie Pergain, who accompanied Theodore Dresier, novelist, on his trip into the coal fields of Southeastern Kentucky in 1931, and William R. Jennings, Los Angeles businessman, were married here October 5, friends disclosed today.

The couple left shortly after the wedding on a honeymoon abroad. She formerly was the wife of Prince Youca Troubetskoy, a film actor and former Russian nobleman.

Police Rescue Pair From Gasoline Tank

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Rescued from a gasoline storage tank into which they fell, Walter Ratela, 23, and Stanley Wadkiewicz, 18, were recovering today from the effects of fumes.

Overcome by the gasoline vapor, as they were cleaning the tank, the youths were saved by firemen wearing gas masks.

Pinchot Urges State Mark 'T. R.' Birthday

HARRISBURG, Oct. 20.—(INS.)—Gov. Gifford Pinchot today exhorted citizens of the commonwealth to commemorate on Thursday, October 27, the seventy-fourth anniversary of the birth of Theodore Roosevelt, "most typical American of our times."

The Governor in his proclamation termned Roosevelt the "incorruptible enemy of special privilege and a great example to all Americans of courage, perseverance and common sense."

Postoffice, Store At Bertha Burned

BURGETTSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 20.—Fire destroyed the four-story building housing the Four States Supply Company store and postoffice at Bertha, near here, at 5 o'clock this morning. Burgettstown firemen, aiding local volunteers, were handicapped by the lack of water.

R. D. Thompson, night watchman, was slightly burned. Damage was estimated by firemen at $10,000.

PITTSBURGH DAY

IN keeping with our Silver Anniversary, celebrating 25 years of progress, it is fitting that we should set aside one day to be known as PITTSBURGH DAY... dedicated to the city responsible for whatever measure of success we have achieved... Fine words mean little in times like these... so we believe that the best way to commemorate PITTSBURGH DAY is to distribute merchandise to the tens of thousands of families in this community at prices that will save them money.

WE have reduced our profit to a minimum for this one day... in order to give the public the outstanding values of this Silver Anniversary... So we invite all Pittsburghers to join with us in celebrating PITTSBURGH DAY on Saturday... Winter is coming on, and you'll need apparel for yourselves and the children, as well as things for the home... We welcome the opportunity to supply you at greatly reduced costs... that's our way of saying THANK YOU for what you have done for us.

Stomach Sufferer, 60 Yrs. Old, Relieved

"I used ACIDINE as directed and found it to do all you claim for it," says M. A. Funk of Riverton, N. J. "I am 60 years of age and had been bothered with acid fermentation and gas in stomach. I had tried everything without results. ACIDINE gave me relief at once."

Just another of thousands who are astonished at the way ACIDINE succeeds when other known remedies fail. The reason is it is different from other medicines. ACIDINE contains Japtase, which, in laboratory tests, digested 800 times its own weight of certain heavy, starchy foods that cause trouble. ACIDINE stops burning acid, soothes irritated stomach and intestinal linings, ends gas, headache, sleeplessness from acidity and helps digest starchy foods and meats.

Don't run chances of dangerous painful troubles from acidity. Get ACIDINE today from your druggist and note quick relief from sourness, pain and belching. You can eat, drink and smoke as you like. Maker guarantees results that satisfy you or money back.

RADIO TANGLES BAR FORD TALK

Inquirers seeking the reason for WCAE's cancellation of Henry Ford's radio speech last night, learned today that it was due to a sudden change in the length of the Ford program which conflicted with the previously contracted time of another firm.

Ford had been scheduled to deliver his address supporting President Hoover over the NBC red network from 8:30 to 8:45; with a Pittsburgh commercial broadcast immediately following.

At 5:21 yesterday afternoon NBC officials wired, asking an extension of 15 minutes for the Ford broadcast. WCAE replied that it would be impossible to cancel the 8:45 program, but that the station would carry at least the first half of the Ford program. As this would have been objectionable to NBC, WCAE explained it had to cancel the Ford speech.

Frank Mulloy, director of public relations at WCAE, said:

"It's the policy of WCAE to broadcast the political addresses of all parties without favor or exception. In substantiation of this, attention is called to cancellation by WCAE of various programs to broadcast the unexpected continuation of several addresses of President Hoover.

Two Men Arrested In Counterfeit Case

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 20.—Lee Boone, 42, and Wilbur Toner, 26, of New Castle, Pa., were arrested, charged with distribution of counterfeit 50-cent pieces.

'BRIDAL PARTY' RIDES RODS

ERIE, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—An impromptu box car "honeymoon," which preceeded a wedding ceremony planned here was ended when the Travelers' Aid stepped in to thwart Cupid's designs.

Agnes McNulty, 27, pretty Boston, Mass., stenographer, and Kurt Trappenberg, 28, Salt Lake City, who said they traveled in the box car from Elyria, O., were to have been the bride and groom. Gerald Garvey, 44, Chicago, who was supposed to enact the role of "best man," accompanied them.

Authorities ordered the men out of the city after suspending sentence for stealing the ride, and arrangements were made to return the girl to her home.

'OLD IRONSIDES' ON AIR

Romance of 7 Colleges on WCAE

With modern microphones installed on the ancient deck of the U. S. S. Constitution, ceremonies marking the one hundred and thirty-fifth anniversary of the launching of the vessel famed in American history as "Old Ironsides" will be heard over NBC and CBS networks, locally through KDKA and WJAS, tomorrow from 4 to 4:30 p. m. Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams and Commander Lewis J. Gulliver, present commanding officer of the famous frigate, will be the principal speakers. Martial music by the Navy Band also will be heard.

The romance in the founding of seven American women's colleges is related by women speakers representing those institutions in a series of programs to be presented each Thursday at 3:30 during the Women's Radio Review on WCAE. The series, inaugurated today by Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, of Barnard College of Columbia University, will include talks by Mrs. Thomas W. Lamont, wife of the international banker; Miss Candace Stimson, sister of Secretary of State Stimson; Miss Frances Perkins, New York State Industrial Commissioner, and Dean Mildred Thompson, of Vassar.

Miss Goldersleeve

Walter Damrosch, presenting the second of the 1932-33 NBC Music Appreciation hours over combined NBC networks including WCAE and KDKA tomorrow morning at 11, illustrates why myths have an important place in the world's library of music. The conductor has chosen for his illustrations "The Spinning Wheel of Omphale," by Saint-Saens; "Iphigenia's Farewell," from "Incidental Music to Iphigenia in Aulis," by Damrosch, and Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries."

Program Pointers

Listeners are taken on another "journey" filled with color and romance when Capt. Henry's "Show Boat" program with Lanny Ross, Jules Bledsoe, Annette Hanshaw, Charles Winninger, Mabel Jackson and the Hall Johnson Choir, goes on the air over WCAE tonight at 9 o'clock. Interludes of blackface comedy are provided by Molasses and January . . . On the same station at 10, the modern "Baron Munchausen" tell another group of outlandish stories as a highlight of the cigaret dance hour. The Baron's wild flights into the realms of imagination are interspersed with George Olsen's music.

Mr. Ross

A musical program composed entirely of American themes, dedicating Columbia's new Washington, D. C., outlet, WJSV, is presented by Andre Kostelanetz on WJAS at 10.

"The Old Lady of Death Valley," the story of a pioneer woman's attempt to live in the city after spending most of her life in the Gobi Desert, is dramatized on KDKA at 9 tonight.

Georgie Price gives his impression of Al Jolson singing "Sonny Boy" and offers a parody on the ballad, "As You Desire Me," as WJAS highlights at 7:45.

Norine West, dramatic soprano; Walter Jackson, tenor, and Eleanor Jones, pianist, present a half-hour program of semi-classical and popular selections from the studios of WWSW at 9.

Dr. Sigmund Spaeth discusses the moon as an inspiration to song writers during his "Song Sleuth" presentation at 8:15 on KDKA.

Listening In— Marriage Epidemic Sweeping Radio Studios

A matrimonial epidemic seems to have been sweeping through the ranks of radio satellites . . . Don Ball, the Columbia announcer, and Virginia Arnold, CBS pianist, startled their fellow broadcasters the other day by taking leading parts in a quiet and unexpected wedding at 8:30 a. m. Just two weeks before, Carlyle Stevens was married and Paul Douglas participated in a merger a month prior to that . . . on Saturday, John McCloy, market editor of KDKA, and Patsy McKillips, of Fairview road, will trek altarwards . . . and not so long ago Lottie Lawson and Pete Weldy, of WCAE, were welded, as were Jim Hays, WCAE announcer, and Florence Schmalhorst.

Miss Arnold

Those Crime Club dramatizations, now heard twice a week, go on a one-a-week schedule, offering a complete mystery story during each broadcast, beginning November 2.

Kate Smith drove 260 miles from Lake Placid to Poughkeepsie last week-end to supervise a show for a 13-year-old boy who has been confined in a respirator for 14 months. He's Birdsall Sweet, whose case first attracted nation-wide attention when Kate dedicated a program to him and asked her listeners to write to him, which they did—with nearly 14,000 letters, cards and gifts. Kate's show was staged with fireworks, candy, souvenirs and an aerial display by two well known pilots.

The time of the broadcast of the girls' finals in the State Atwater Kent auditions Saturday night at WCAE has been moved to an earlier spot due to a broadcast by President Hoover scheduled from 8:30 to 9:30 that night. The auditions will be heard from 7:15 to 7:45 and from 8 to 8:30 p. m.

While he was on vacation, Earl Lawrence, accompanist for the Men O' Song quartet, attended an auction sale of live stock . . . Carried away by the spirit of the thing, he put in a few bids and found himself with a pedigreed Guernsey bull calf on his hands.

Radio oddities . . . Ed Reese, the radio sleuth, has never participated in the solution of an actual crime—but he's a member of the World Association of Detectives . . . Frank Readick, who's noted for his impersonations of "tough" characters, is small and affable . . . Although the Three X Sisters were born and reared in the United States, they were never heard on the air in this country until after they had won radio fame in Europe . . . The Boswells, known as singers, started their professional career as a sax-banjo-piano trio . . . In the original Burns and Allen skits, George had all the humorous lines and Gracie did the "straight" parts. . . . Ted di Corsia, radio impersonator of President Hoover, also has portrayed Max Schmeling and, on a number of occasions, has played the part of a small child.

Uncle Bob Reads Comics to Betty

Uncle Bob and Betty take WCAE listeners on another mythical tour of the land of Sun-Telegraph comic page characters when they read the "funnies" tonight at 6 o'clock.

Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, relays the latest news flashes to WCAE listeners daily at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 2:30 p. m., and 6:30 p. m.

INDIAN SLASHES WHITE 'WITCH'

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—A Tuscarora Indian woman was accused yesterday of attacking a white neighbor whom she believed to be a witch.

Mrs. Innez Stewart, 23, said Mrs. Anna Davey, 36, slashed her arm with a razor and tried to beat her to death with a hammer after calling her a witch. Mrs. Stewart said the attack followed months of witch hunting by Mrs. Davey, whom she accused of hammering on the walls of her apartment in her hunt.

Illness May Balk Tunney's Vote Drive

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 20.—(INS.)—Gene Tunney, former heavyweight boxing champion of the world, will participate in the Democratic campaign in Connecticut, providing he recovers sufficiently from a throat ailment, Democratic state central headquarters announced today.

Gov. Wilbur L. Cross and State Central Chairman David A. Wilson have asked Tunney to engage in a speaking tour of the state on behalf of the party. Tunney is a member of the Governor's staff.

U. S. Typist Deported Fo. 'Rubber' Checks

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Stella Zaremba, 20, Grand Rapids, Mich., typist, who styled Windsor storekeepers "softies" because they took her rubber checks without question, was given a suspended sentence and ordered deported to the United States.

She said she was securing a trousseau and was to have been married on the day of her arrest.

'This Ford Votes For Roosevelt' Stickers Urged

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—A proposal to distribute automobile windshield stickers bearing the slogan, "This Ford votes for Roosevelt" to "counteract" Henry Ford's advice to his employes to vote for President Hoover, was announced by Jerome T. Harriman, through the National Progressive League. Harriman commented:

"Henry Ford may be able to coerce his working men, whose wages he has several times reduced under the Hoover administration, into voting to re-elect Hoover, but he can not intimidate the Ford owners, who are much more numerous."

Coolidge Re-Elected Antiquarians' Head

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—The American Antiquarian Society re-elected its president, Calvin Coolidge, at the annual meeting today. New members elected are Harvey Bassler, New York; Carl Lotus Becker, Ithaca, N. Y., and Samuel Flagg Bemis, Washington.

CHARGES POLICE RADIO MISUSE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Charges that Pennsylvania officials used the state police radio station, WBAK, in Harrisburg, for "personal aggrandizement" and "political propaganda" were laid before the Radio Commission yesterday by Douglas D. Storey, counsel for station WHP, owned and operated by WHP, Inc., a subsidiary of the Harrisburg Telegraph.

Storey made the charges during argument on the application of WHP to take over the time it now shares with WBAK.

Federal Stamp Not Needed by Hunters

HARRISBURG, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Hunters are advised by the State Board of Game Commissioners to disregard the space provided on hunting licenses for a federal stamp to permit hunting of migratory water fowl.

When the licenses were printed, Congress was considering a bill to require such a stamp, but the legislation was not enacted.

Belgian 'Heir' Seeks Ella Wendel Millions

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(INS.)—Another claimant to the $75,000,000 fortune of the late Ella Wendel, eccentric recluse of Fifth avenue, was enlisted today in the battle to break her will.

Through lawyers, Mrs. Amelie Francois Wendel Rubling, of Brussels, Belgium, filed her contention that she is a fifth degree relative of Miss Wendel in Surrogate's Court.

PAIN DEADENED CHEST COLDS LOOSENED WITHOUT DRUGS

Get quick relief from neuralgia pain, sciatica pain, neuritis pain, rheumatic pain, lame back, stiff neck, headache, sinus and chest colds by rubbing plenty of Baume Bengue (pronounced Ben-Gay) on the spot. It doesn't blister or stain. Rub it in till it sinks down and soothes the pain or breaks up the chest cold. Take no drugs, for any drug that is powerful enough to "deaden" pain or loosen a chest cold may not be good for you.

But beware of imitations. Ask your druggist for Baume Bengue by name (called "Ben-Gay" in English). There are many analgesic baumes, mostly cheap imitations of Ben-Gay made out of synthetic drugs. That is why they are cheap. That is also why they are ineffective. Insist on Ben-Gay and you will get real results.

KIDNEY AGONY?

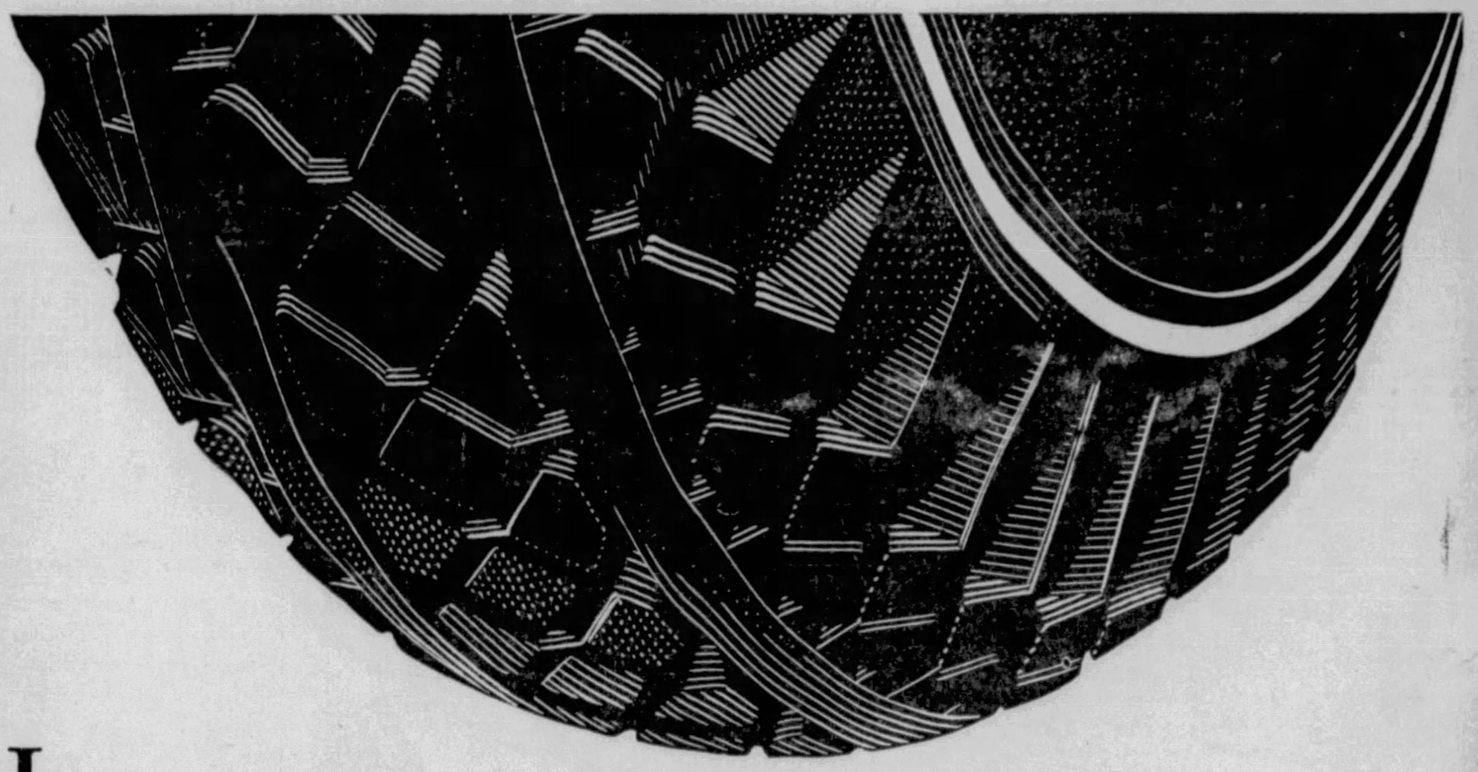
SANTAL MIDY — SANTAL CAPSULES MIDY — FOR BLADDER CATARRH

It costs so little to PLAY SAFE



LOOK at these big, husky, keen-edged blocks of rubber.

They mean more to your safety today than ever before, for the simple reason that there are more tread-bare, gripless, slick and slippery tires on the road today than at any time in history.

If you want to stop when danger threatens – if you want to be sure of grip instead of slip in emergency – there's just one thing to do about it.

Give your car the protection of the safest and best tread that money can buy –the time-tested Goodyear All-Weather.

You can see why this tire is safer, because you can see the sure-footed, hold-fast traction in the center of the tread, where it belongs.

You can check your judgment against the world, by remembering that more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.

And at present price-levels, you can say to yourself: "Why take chances on any second-choice tire when FIRST-choice costs no more!"

NEW LEGISLATION URGED TO CHEAPEN SCHOOL COSTS

CITY WILL NOT OPPOSE NEW BUS LINE

Routing on 13-Cent Co-Operative System To Be Asked

No official city opposition to the proposed citizens' co-operative bus line will develop if a Public Service Commission application becomes necessary, were the opinions expressed today by City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt and Charles P. Lang, assistant solicitor on utility litigation.

Both officials, however, stated the citizens' group would necessarily have to apply for the Commission's approval in the move to establish transportation with average 13-cent fare to members of the Association of Communities.

Waldschmidt pointed out that the law requires a certificate of public convenience before such buses could be placed in operation. This requires filing of a tariff schedule with a layout of routes and setting up of responsibility for indemnity in event of accidents, he said. Lang said the only exception to the law is school buses where the driver is paid out of school funds.

While the city will not oppose operation, a routing schedule will be asked, officials said.

PITT ROMANCE ON ROCKS

A Pitt campus romance of last spring is in the divorce courts after an elopement and marriage that lasted but a few weeks.

Ruby Louise Bush, 19, student in the College of Education, through her father, Harry L. Crispen, 207 Delafield road, Aspinwall, has filed a divorce suit in Common Pleas Court against Henry J. Bush, 22, living at 317 Semple street, post-graduate student. He is a son of a wealthy Illinois family.

They eloped to Wellsburg, W. Va., last June 9, and lived at her home until July 24, when they parted. She charges cruelty.

William Hilldorfer, attorney for Bush, said her father ordered Bush out of the house. Bush is still in love with his wife and sought a reconciliation at school only last Monday, but she swung an umbrella on him, Hilldorfer said. He said Bush treated her well, buying her a $2,000 diamond ring on their honeymoon to New England, and that Bush will contest the divorce suit.

Waynesburg Rallies To Climax Campaign

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Oct. 20.—The presidential campaign in Greene County will reach its climax tonight and Friday morning, when both the Democratic and Republican county organizations stage rallies here.

U. S. Senator James J. Davis will head the list of visiting Republican speakers at the G. O. P. rally Friday morning.

The Democratic rally is scheduled for tonight. Speakers will include Mrs. Carroll Miller, of Pittsburgh, and U. S. Congressman William B. Oliver, of Alabama.

CHAPTER VII.

And now for a word about the mouse deer, loveliest of all jungle miniatures, whose principal habitat is the Malay Archipelago. It is a tiny, deer-like animal, which, full-grown, varies in height from about 10 to 12 inches. It has a beautiful soft coat of a fawn color that sometimes borders on the reddish. Its little legs are no bigger around than a cigaret, its tiny cloven hoofs covering no more space than a dime. A timid creature, walking with queer, stiff-legged, tiptoeing gait, it seems positively unreal—the product of some poet's feverish brain.

Yet it is very real, as anyone who knows the Malay country can tell you. It is the "spittin' image" of the ordinary deer in all details except that the bucks of the mouse-deer family have no antlers.

You're a confirmed zoo-goer, you say, yet you've never seen a mouse deer? That's quite understandable. The Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture bars them as it does all other Asiatic ruminants as possible carriers of such bovine diseases as rinderpest and foot-and-mouth disease. I know because I've tried, unsuccessfully, to get some specimens into the country.

LEGENDARY HERO

The mouse deer is the hero of Malay legend. The Malays—to whom he is known as Pelandok—endow him with a supernatural cunning. Their fairy tales are not concerned with physical prowess. Pelandok, the hero of all these brave tales, is a gallant knight who depends on outwitting rather than outfighting the

JUDGE TO PRESS VICE INQUIRY HERE

Patterson Will Again Challenge Constable Reports in December

Judge Frank P. Patterson, presiding in Criminal Court, is making plans to again question constables of the county on law violations in their districts, when they make their returns the first Monday in December, it was learned today.

He has received hundreds of letters from all sections of the county, complaining of the operation of all sorts of rackets. These complaints are being classified into city wards, boroughs and townships. As constables report from these districts, they will be questioned in the court's efforts to break up gambling clubs, use of slot machines, sale of liquor, operation of disorderly places and rackets of every kind.

COMPLAINTS NUMEROUS

Several constables have visited Judge Patterson seeking information as to what they should do under various circumstances and how they should make their returns. Judge Patterson said:

"It is true I have received hundreds of letters, complaining about conditions in various parts of the county. About 10 per cent of those who have sent me letters signed names, but very often they cannot be located in the directory or the telephone book."

"Some letters are pathetic. One was signed 'A Heart-Broken Mother.' Then others use such names as 'voter, taxpayer, citizen, your true friend.' About 1 per cent of the letters received came from persons giving correct addresses and without any strings attached to the information.

SEES IMPROVEMENT

"Business men also have complained about rackets in their neighborhood. I have received many letters from ministers. A large number of letters sent in complaining about conditions came from women. Some letters received bear indications that the writer is prompted by personal or political grievances."

Judge Patterson feels the operation of rackets has been greatly reduced since the court's drive against law violations began.

STEEL LEADERS MEET HERE

The tenth annual convention of the American Institute of Steel Construction began today at Hotel Schenley with leaders in the steel fabricating business from all parts of the country attending.

Charles N. Fitts, Boston, Mass., president of the Institute, delivered an address dealing with the effects of unregulated competition in the industry. A report was also heard from Charles F. Abbott, executive director.

A feature this afternoon was discussions on the future of the structural steel industry, including new uses for steel and what they may mean to the business. Talks were made by W. M. Wood, president of the Mississippi Valley Structural Steel Company, Decatur, Ill., and C. G. Conley, president of the Mt. Vernon Bridge Company, Mt. Vernon, O. The annual banquet is to be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

PAGEANT MARKS CHURCH FETE

An historical pageant tomorrow night will feature the one hundredth anniversary of the Butler Street Methodist Episcopal Church, being held this week.

The pageant, starting with the Pilgrims, will portray the historical background of the church. Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Forney will be in charge of the dramatic program.

Tonight greetings from former pastors and addresses are scheduled. The Rev. Drs. W. W. Hall, E. S. White, T. Charlesworth, R. Cuthbert, F. L. Teets, R. L. McQuinston F. Spielman and Ross Hunt will participate.

The anniversary celebration will close Sunday night with a special service participated in by the churches of Lawrenceville. District Superintendent L. D. Spaugy will preach the sermon. The service will close with the lighting of 100 candles on the church's birthday cake.

Stimson Sounds The Baffled Cry Of the Republic

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

We tender Secretary Stimson our underdone regards. And compliment him on being the first general to lead his troops into battle yelling:

"It might have been worse."

That's the rebuttal cry of the republic. It's always darkest before dawn. Especially when the Eskimo-butler drinks the oil out of the lamp.

How about the depression? As the old lady said when she picked up the porcupine:

"Nature in the raw is never mild."

It might have been worse. Pass out the complaint blanks, boys, and we will sing the baffled cry of the Republic. The politicians look at the farmers, the businessmen and the bankers and know that it might have been worse. It might have been the politicians, too.

If you can tell us how it could have been worse we will join the Prof. Einstein huddle and understand all. Exactly 10 men know what the professor is buzzing about.

But it takes only eight men to make a cabinet. Add a couple more and stir until you realize it might have been worse without comprehending why, what and how.

REALTORS FIGHT SCHOOL TAXES

Protesting against high taxes and demanding some relief from tax burdens now being carried by property owners in the city, members of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board tonight will attend the first budget fixing session of the Board of Education. John H. Swem, of the Thirty-second Ward Taxpayers' League, said he and several other league representatives also would be present.

At a meeting of Senator James J. Coyne's legislation committee seeking ways to reduce municipal government cost yesterday Mr. Swem presented a resolution adopted by the Thirty-second Ward organization, suggesting the Coyne committee present legislation which would eliminate from the program of the Board of Education all activities not directly a part, nor essential to, the mental development of the school children.

JAWORSKI AIDE DENIED PAROLE

Stanley Bodziakowski, doing a term in Western Penitentiary for his part in the numerous crimes laid to the once famed Jaworski gang, has lost his fight for parole. He is serving 20 years for robbery. Bodziakowski's appeal was acted upon yesterday by the State Board of Pardons in session at Harrisburg.

Other Allegheny county appeals heard included Carmine Ciccarelli, second degree murder; Charles W. Fallon, receiving stolen goods and Courtney Hill, robbery.

TAXPAYERS ASK COYNE GROUP MAKE STUDY

Elimination of All 'Non-Essentials,' Theme of Plea

A suggestion that the Coyne legislative committee seeking ways and means of reducing costs of municipal governments, present legislation which would curtail activities of the Board of Education and eliminate activities which are not directly a part of and essential to mental development were being considered today.

This suggestion, presented in the form of a resolution recently passed by the Thirty-second Ward Taxpayers' League, was accepted by Senator James J. Coyne, chairman of the committee, meeting yesterday, and turned over to his sub-committee investigating School Board expenditures.

CODE REVISION URGED

The resolution suggested that the school code be revised and unnecessary activities eliminated. It stated that the buildings, grounds and equipment of the School Board should not exceed the practical efficient necessity for broad mental development and should represent an institution of learning rather than a recreational center.

The resolution was presented by John H. Swen, who said such legislation would make possible a reduction in taxes. He declared that the taxation burden today is nothing more than confiscation of real estate. He said his organization would be represented at the first budget fixing session of the Board of Education tonight.

Thomas Stanford of 134 De Sota street appeared and suggested a change in the graded tax laws. He also recommended cutting down the number of polling places.

MERGERS AGAIN ASKED

Following up its suggestion of several weeks ago that a number of the smaller municipal governments in this county be merged or transferred directly to the state, the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board presented a tabulation showing the population, county real estate valuation, tax millage and tax levies for each of the 24 local governments in the county.

The previous suggestion stated that at present when many communities overlap each other and the change in modes of transportation bringing communities closer together, it was felt the need of the many local governments no longer exist.

The comparison of average and total millage and the distribution of the tax dollar for each group was of unusual interest to the committee. It showed that the average total millage for the 6 boroughs was slightly higher than that of the city of Pittsburgh, although the millage rate for municipal purposes in the city is higher than the borough rate, and the school millage is lower.

MEET AGAIN NOVEMBER 2

The tabulations showed that in 1931 the cost of county, school and municipal government in the county was $72,998,372.84.

The committee will meet again November 2, at which time some substantial reports are expected from several sub-committees working on various phases of the investigation. George Dimling was appointed to the committee, headed by R. L. McKallip, investigating the school board, the city and county reviewers and assessors and the jury commissioners. Two accountants were also named to assist this committee.

U. S. NEEDS BEER, GERMAN ARTIST SAYS

'Spirit and Feeling' Lacking, Professor Charges

America would be a paradise if it had beer, is the belief of Prof. Ernest Oldenbruch, of Great Vienna School of Painting, Vienna, Austria, conducting a school here this week for the members of the Master Painters and Decorators' Association. He said:

"Work is better here but the United States does not have the feeling and spirit that Germany does. Bring back beer and it would be a paradise."

Prof. Oldenbruch will have on display some work of the school, which he is planning to exhibit at the World's Fair in Chicago next year. The work, which consists of samples of paneling, graining and pictorial decoration is now on display at the John Dewar & Co. store, 422 Penn avenue.

The exhibit demonstrates the possibility of making any kind of wood, paper or metal look like natural wood by painting and graining it. It is the result of 12 years' experimenting.

Brothers Wed Sisters; One Denied Divorce

Morris M. Wolf, jeweler, one of two brothers who married two sisters the same day and later filed divorce suits charging the girls deserted them, was refused a divorce by Judge James R. Macfarlane in Common Pleas Court.

Della Wolf contested the action and Judge Macfarlane held that Wolf never offered to provide a home and did not ask his wife to return after their separation. Wolf was quoted as saying in Desertion and Non-support Court that he would not take her back and live with her.

She objected to living with his family and wanted to go housekeeping, Judge Macfarlane's opinion recited, holding that the charge of desertion was not established.

They were married February 21, 1928, when her sister, Anne, married his brother, Harry A. Wolf, certified public accountant for the Federal Internal Revenue Department. The first-named couple parted August 9, 1928 and the second, June 29, 1928.

Harry also filed a divorce suit, charging desertion, now pending. The men live at 6348 Waldron street and the girls at home, 6515 Darlington road.

SEARCH PUSHED FOR THUG WHO HIT WOMAN

While police sought a Negro who seized, choked and robbed a woman in McPherson boulevard, another was shot by a policeman as he fled in a stolen automobile in the Hill district late last night.

Mrs. W. F. Stewart, of 811 St. James street, victim of the attack, told Squirrel Hill police she had been knocked to the street by the assailant, who seized her by the throat. The Negro fled with Mrs. Stewart's pocketbook containing $1.20.

Shot in the chest as he and three companons, two of them girls, fled from police at Soho and Wadsworth streets last night, Frank Ray, 16, Negro, of 2143 Heman street, was in critical condition in Passavant Hospital today.

Patrolmen Walter Shelton, George Best and Daniel Owen opened fire on the speeding car when its occupants ignored their command to stop. Ray was believed to have been riding in the back seat of the car police say was stolen. His companions, George Davenport, 17, of 340 Soho street; Georgette Hall, 18, of Morgan street, and Esther Hall, 16, of 2505 Wylie avenue, all Negroes, were lodged in Center Avenue Police Station on suspicious person charges, police said.

The auto, owned by Harold Young, of 2255 Bloomer street, had been stolen a short time before from Herron avenue. Ray was said by Homicide Detectives Thomas Mulvihill and Nicholas Spudich to have confessed he had stolen two other automobiles in the last few days.

OIL FIRM SUES FOR MILLION TAXES HERE

The suit of the Big Lake Oil Company, with offices in the Benedum-Trees Building, against D. B. Heiner, collector of internal revenue, seeking to recover $1,565,875.84, with interest, alleged to have been erroneously collected as income tax for 1924 to 1927, inclusive, was being heard today before Judge R. M. Gibson in Federal Court. It is said to be the largest claim ever instituted here for return of income taxes.

Points of law were argued covering the government's right to collect taxes on profits derived from sale of gas and oil produced in Reagan County, Tex., by the plaintiff company under oil and gas permits and leases from the state of Texas, on land set aside by the state for endowment, maintenance, support and benefit of the University of Texas.

The plaintiff declares collection of such profits would be unconstitutional and an interference by the federal government with the state of Texas.

INSULL ORDERS PET DOGS SHOT

READING, England, Oct. 20.—(INS.)—There was considerable speculation today as to the motive of Samuel Insull in ordering two favorite dogs shot to death.

The former Chicago utilities emperor, now in Greece while Chicago authorities are seeking to extradite him, has not been on his farm here, where the dogs were kept, in five weeks.

It was believed Insull, realizing the impossibility of ever seeing his dogs again, ordered them shot because he feared the possibility of ill treatment if they passed into other hands.

A. Colman, the venerinary who killed the dogs and buried them in graves which already had been dug, declared:

"It was hateful business."

He added:

"The dogs were in such excellent health. They were a Sealyham and Airedale, 8 and 3 years old, respectively."

G. O. P. RALLY IN BELLEVUE

A Republican rally of the North boroughs will be held in Bellevue High School tonight at 8 o'clock. The speakers will include William Coleman, Harry Estep and Mrs. Mary Flinn Lawrence. The State Committee, the Junior Republican organization, and William Walker, Avalon, and William Brown, Tarentum, candidates for legistature, will also be present.

The Twelfth Legislative District has arranged a mass meeting in Coraopolis High School tonight at 8 o'clock. Speakers will include Senator James J. Davis, P. H. Dewey, State Senator Frank J. Harris and Congressman Guy E. Campbell. Legislative candidates from the district will also be heard. Judge E. Heber Dithrich will preside.

Benjamin Lencher, former assistant district attorney, will address a Republican noonday meeting in the Green Room of the Penn-Lincoln Hotel, Wilkinsburg, Friday. Coroner W. J. McGregor, chairman of the local Republican Committee, will be in charge.

Divorce Given Wife Of Movie Director

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—A divorce from Louis Weitzenkorn, motion picture director, was granted in Superior Court today to Mrs. Irma Weitzenkorn on grounds of cruelty.

She charged he associated with other women and called her an "ignoramus." She asked alimony of $500 a month, but her attorney said today a property settlement was made out of court.

Panhellenic Cup and Plaque Captured By Co-eds Here

Beta Sigma Omicron, national social sorority at the University of Pittsburgh, now holds the most outstanding scholarship record ever attained by any campus group.

For the second consecutive year the sorority has won the Panhellenic scholarship cup and set a new high average in doing it.

Besides this honor the girls have won a silver cup and a bronze plaque. Both were won by outclassing other Beta Sigma Omicron chapters in scholastic averages. The cup was formerly located at the University of California and the plaque at Tulane University.

Elizabeth Heiss, Pitt senior, who has helped to keep the sorority on top, recently won the group's fourth award. She was given the Pi Lamba Theta prize for excelling in personality, scholarship, leadership and activities.

Nick Ferraro, 3, of 1521 Bedford avenue, was in Mercy Hospital today with a probable skull fracture suffered in a fall from the second-floor window at 43 Washington place late yesterday, according to police repot. The boy fell about 15 feet to the back yard.

WOMEN TO PUSH MISSION WORK

The Women's Missionary Society of the Pittsburgh Synod of the United Lutheran Church, will continue to foster its present missionary undertakings in America and non-Christian lands, taking no cognizance of the second installment of the report of the Laymen's Foreign Mission Inquiry which urges a united front of all sects and religions against atheism and non-religion.

This was made known by Miss Eleanor E. Demmler, of Pittsburgh, president of the missionary group which opened its fourteenth annual convention yesterday in Trinity Lutheran Church, Stockton avenue and Arch street, North Side. Miss Demmler said:

"We Intend to continue our missionary work on its present basis, in this country and abroad, bringing non-Christians into the church."

The report of the laymen's inquiry groupp, which was issued by Albert L. Scott, of New York, recommends the halting of the attempt to Christianize non-Christian groups while a vigorous fight is waged for the survival of all religions.

RIVER YIELDS DEATH GUN

The .45 caliber automatic revolver, said to have been used by the John Maug gang in the slaying of Constable Vernon (Port) Moses, of Ross Township, last May, was recovered from the Monongahela River at the South Twenty-second Street Bridge today.

The gun was the fifth fished from the river by James Fike, Uniontown, with his magnet. One more is sought.

Detectives say Maug, C. J. Moyer and Edward Turpack have confessed the fatal shooting of Moses. They are in jail on murder charges.

Brentwood Building Combines Utility, Simple Beauty

By PENELOPE REDD

The dedication of the new $250,000 high school building in Brentwood at 8 a. m. tomorrow, represents an achievement resulting from many years of effort on the part of the community. The building, designed by Harry Viehman and Edward B. Lee, architects, forecasts a new trend in school architecture away from the sometimes lavish embellishment with historic ornament to the frank construction of a plant designed for school purposes.

Miss Redd

Built of a brick which runs the gamut of color from rose to deep violet, the structure enjoys an exceptional site adjacent to the Brentwood Park. Overlooking the south hills, now like gorgeous bouquets of color in the distance, a natural ampitheater is formed by the deep valley in the foreground.

The building states without apology its purpose as a school. Many windowed, with only the logical development of brick pilasters to interrupt the severity of the profile, the building is restrained to the structural necessities of its function.

The main entrance is free of the dominant fenestration since it expresses the ends of classrooms. Brick pilasters on the facade flank the central architectural composition in stone. The stone doorway with carved panels bearing the seal of Brentwood Borough and of the state, is the only departure from the structure's necessities.

Kingsley's Position To Remain Unfilled

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—The New York Life Insurance Company announced today that no effort would be made to fill the vacancy in the office of chairman of the board caused by the recent death of Darwin P. Kingsley.

Gossip had mentioned the name of Calvin Coolidge, a director of the company, as a possible successor to Mr. Kingsley.

Garage Door Blamed By Injured Youth

Found in the backyard of his home suffering from a laceration, Joseph Gottschalk, 19, of 5111 Duncan street, was taken to West Penn Hospital early today. The youth told police he was injured when his garage door swung open and knocked him down. Police are investigating.

POLICE CALLED TO OPEN DOOR

"Ah-h-h-huh."

For nearly an hour an excited mother coaxed her 2-year-old daughter who had locked herself in her room with her 10-months-old sister at 126 Altadena drive, Mt. Lebanon.

Then she telephoned the police. When the township officers opened the door with a skeleton key they found Roseann mischievously hiding the key under the mattress of her baby sister's crib. Mrs. Alyce Headlee, hugging the youngster, admonished:

"Why Roseann, why did you do such a thing? You've been a very bad little girl."

Nonchalantly, Roseann replied:

Pastor Puts Ban On Collections During Slump

FARRELL, Pa., Oct. 20.—The collection basket has been banned at the Calvary Baptist Church. The Rev. S. A. Renicks, pastor, said:

"My congregation, composed mostly of steel workers, has very little to give. I discovered many were staying away from services because they could not contribute."

The pastor also announced there would be no charges for funerals or marriages in the church.

Oil Firm Increases Salaries 5 Per Cent

CLEVELAND, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—A salary increase of 5 per cent, affecting every one of its more than 300 employes in Cleveland, was announced today by the Pocahontas Oil Corporation.

At a meeting held after midnight so that both day and night workers could be present, checks for the 5 per cent increase, retroactive to October 1, were handed the employes.

Bannister to Open Play in New York

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Friends of Harry Bannister, actor and divorced husband of Ann Harding, motion picture star, received telegrams from him today saying he planned to produce a play in New York this fall.

Bannister is flying here after several months in Europe. He said he acquired the play while abroad.

Bear Hunter Accused By Dying Pal, Held

SEATTLE, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—A second degree murder charge today faced Theodore D. Weed, who allegedly pushed his hunting companion, Frank Simpson, over a cliff when Simpson missed a shot at a bear.

Simpson lived 11 days after the fall, dying last Sunday. He accused Weed of causing his fatal injuries. Weed, who denies the charge, is at liberty under $10,000 bail.

PROSPECT DIES ON TEST RIDE

E. S. Henle, 55, of Lebanon Hall, Bower Hill and Washington roads, Mt. Lebanon, was killed and his two sons and an automobile salesman were injured when an automobile in which they were riding struck a pole in Washington road, near the Clifton School, Upper St. Clair Township, last night.

The machine, which Henle was considering buying, was driven by his elder son, Randolph, according to Motorcycle Patrolman Robert Hasley, of Mt. Lebanon. Randolph's injuries were treated by a physician. The other son, Arnold, 13, suffering cuts and bruises, was taken to Mercy Hospital. Thomas Hook, the salesman, of 439 Washington road, was taken to Homeopathic Hospital.

Scout Car Patrolman Terrance McKnight was in Mercy Hospital today with probable internal injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile while directing traffic in the Boulevard of the Allies near Brady street last night. Albert J. Schneider, of 210 Third street, Trafford City, alleged driver of the car, was arrested.

Students to Honor Resigned Principal

TITUSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Leaders of a student demonstration, protesting the resignation of Paul J. Murphy as principal of Titusville High School, plan to present the educator with "a testimonial of loyalty" today.

Murphy, in a letter of resignation to the school board, said his action was prompted by "rumors that are abroad about me," adding that because of the rumors his "physical and mental strength" was at the breaking point.

FREE MAN HELD IN FATAL FIRE

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 20.—Deputy State Fire Marshal E. J. Ritz today said he believed the fire Monday night in which Assistant Fire Chief Charles Beiswenger was killed was of incendiary origin. Charles Ruttenberg, merchant, occupying the ground floor of the building, was released after questioning. Ruttenberg was convicted of second degree murder in Green County, Pa., for the death of his nephew in a fire, and has an appeal pending.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

Saves $2. So Easy! No Cooking!

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in more homes than any other cough remedy, because it gives more prompt, positive relief. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Syrup is easily made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

Instantly you feel its penetrating effect. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm, clears the air passages, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief in severe coughs.

GARRISON, AIDE OF WILSON, DIES

SEABRIGHT, N. J., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Lindley M. Garrison, secretary of war under Woodrow Wilson until his resignation in 1916, died here last night.

During his 68 years, Garrison served both as a New Jersey state official and in Washington. Then he returned to the private practice of law.

Garrison's break with Wilson came unexpectedly early in 1916. He had been pressing for a national defense plan built upon a federal continental army as opposed to the National Guard. Wilson, too, espoused the plan, but he was not "irrevocably or dogmatically committed to any one plan."

When Garrison resigned, February 10, 1916, his assistant secretary, Henry Breckinridge, resigned with him. Newton D. Baker later was named secretary.

FEAR HELD BAR TO RECOVERY

Fear is a barrier to reconstruction in the opinion of the Rev. C. Rankin Barnes, executive secretary of the National Council of the Episcopal Church expressed in an address last night at the thirteenth synod, Province of Washington, Episcopal Church in Trinity Cathedral. He said:

"Economists and politicians have given us hundreds of plans for reconstruction. We are afraid of them because we have not that spiritual quality of open-mindedness which gives us courage to go ahead."

More than 350 delegates from Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia are in attendance.

WILL 'AMERICA'S GIFT,' HE SAYS

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Will Rogers, guest of the American colony at a dinner last night, said he was "America's gift to those who didn't see the Prince of Wales." He declared:

"I'm here to lower the tariff. Argentina exports wheat, meat and gigolos, and the United States puts a tariff on the wrong two."

He recalled how he came to Argentina in 1901, with money he earned selling cattle, and found himself unable to hold a job as an Argentine cowboy. He lived in Buenos Aires until his money was gone, he said, then worked his way to Africa on a cattle boat and joined a wild west show.

He planned to leave today to return to the United States by way of Brazil.

'Wildcatter' Leaves $6,716,960 Estate

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—The Oklahoma estate of the late T. B. Slick, "king of the wildcatters," was appraised at a net value of $6,716,960.02 in a report filed in County Court.

Mrs. Slick, widow of the oil millionaire, and Charles F. Urschell, whose late wife was Slick's sister, were married Monday in St. Louis and left on a honeymoon trip to Europe. The widow will receive three-ninths of the estate and each of three children two-ninths.

Maintenance Fund Drive Progresses

Reports of progress in the drive of the Y. M. and W. H. A. drive for a $60,000 maintenance fund were made at a meeting of workers in the Henry Hotel yesterday. Edgar J. Kaufmann presided. Another meeting was to be held at noon today.

The principal speaker was the Very Rev. N. H. R. Moor, dean of Trinity Cathedral. He lauded the drive and urged workers to do their utmost to make it a success.

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

By SALLY MARTIN

We Shouldn't Allow People To Impose On Us

Once they were engaged, but, because his pocketbook was flat, she paid for the ring.

Nor was that all. When he got out of a job she paid for his eats and his shirts, and even a suit—for all of which he, of course, promised to pay her back.

And now? Well, now the engagement is off. Lil has found a new love. She has said she'd cross off the money she gave him, and call it square. Which, if you ask us, is pretty soft for Carl.

But, the rub! Carl insists he must have the ring, and is threatening to put up a scrap if she doesn't give it to him, although he's never paid a cent on it.

And Lil's asking if she should hand it to him!

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I suppose you'll think I am a fool when you read this. I really think so myself, to tell the truth, but I don't know just what to do.

"About five years ago I met Jack, and went with him a while. Then, about a year after that, I met Carl, and began to go with him. For two years we were engaged. Due to unemployment, Carl couldn't buy me a ring, which would have cost $50.

"So finally we made an agreement that he would pay me back if I bought it, because I wanted one so badly. So I got it and paid $75 for it. Time went on and he couldn't find work, and I think I've really supported him for quite a while. I've given him over $200 now. Well, finally, I broke with him. Then I met Jack, again, and now I am engaged to him.

DEMANDS RING

"But even now Carl asks me to buy him shirts and shoes, and even a suit. I told him that he should forget about the money he owes me and we would call it square, but he isn't satisfied with that. He wants the ring. I told him I wanted to keep that, but he says he will fight for it through the court if I don't give it to him.

"Every one tells me that I am a nut if I give it to him, and that I should keep it. What do you think? Has he any right to demand it? Shall I give it to him? I will if you say so. Jack says it is up to me—that he doesn't care. "LILLIAN."

Shall you give him the ring?

Use your head, sister! Why on earth should you give it to him? If it is true that you paid for it, he hasn't any more right to it than I have! It never was his. It never will be his, unless and until he is willing to pay you what you paid for it, and does so.

GET RID OF HIM

As for "fighting for it through the court," don't let him kid you. An honest court is the last place on earth that a moocher like him wants to face. He has imposed on you—with your consent—until he thinks you are just a little silly dumbbell that he can work.

Stop seeing him or talking to him. Stop letting him hang around and work you. You're through with him. Tell him so, and make it stick. If you don't, you're going to mess up your life plenty, and it'll be no one's fault but your own.

It is a noble thing to stick to an honest, sincere friend or sweetheart in a pinch; but it's a vicious thing to waste your one and only life on a moocher. And if you do spoil your life by such sappiness, youngster, you've no one to blame but yourself.

It's up to you, whether people take advantage of you, or whether you're treated with consideration and respect.

Dig up a little spunk and backbone, and use it, or take the consequences!

Man Still Holds the Key to Women's Rule, Fay King Believes

By FAY KING

There are three types of woman in the ken of every man these days.

The woman in the home. The woman in the office. The woman in the play-world.

For the home, man chooses a woman by heart and character. For the office he wants brains and ability. In the play-world he seeks beauty and gaiety.

The home is as happy as the woman in it. The office as efficient as its able secretary. The play-world as glamorous as pretty women make it.

Woman attains any of these spheres through man's preference and approval. She reigns supreme in them only so long as he is pleased.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Shower

Dear Mr. Beeckman:

1—If a friend has been invited to a shower for the bride a few days before the wedding, should a wedding announcement be sent to this same friend?

2—I know the wedding announcement is a formal message, but would it be so terribly bad for one to put a personal note with the announcement sent to friends . . . good friends . . . but those with whom we do not usually correspond?

RED HEAD.

1—These are two entirely separate items, and what affects one does not affect the other. If the friend is such a close friend that she was invited to a shower for the bride-to-be, then it would seem natural for her to receive an invitation to the wedding. If there are to be so few guests invited to the wedding that she would not be in the list, then, if there are to be announcements sent to a wider group, it would be natural to send her an announcement.

2—Yes, writing a message on this formal detail would be in the worst of form. This formal item should be kept formal.

Condolences

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me how soon after a death of a close friend should I send a card of sympathy?

P.

A note of sympathy should be written as soon after we hear of the death. The sooner, the better, for seasonable words of sympathy are of more help than delayed words.

Notice I said a "note" of sympathy, for this is the best form. The card of sympathy, if you mean the ready-made cards that one buys, is not correct.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Hair dyeing is no job for the amateur, though there are women who make a stab at it and come through. It is the most difficult work that is done in beauty shops. If a coloring agent is performing successfully, it is not wise to change. One chemical placed upon another may kick up a disturbing color riot. Once started, dyeing must go on forever like the little brook, since Missus Nature knows nothing about what is going on, pushes out the white shafts that give the beauty game away.

Fatted calves can be slithered down to more willowy proportions, but there is no overnight magic that will do the business. Adipose tissue is substantial substance, has powerful endurance when it is located on legs. Lifting up and down on the toes, 50 times night and morning, unsettles it. Jumping the rope drives it to a state of dissolution. High kicking is recommended, but that's not always easy for the heavyweight. A resolution not to ride in elevators, but to walk up stairs, will be rewarded in due course of time by pins of slender and beautiful lines.

With bodices getting more seams in them the feminine shape must be elegant, not a slimpy figurette. Whereas a few years ago the girls were all de-busting themselves, strapping upper stories into tight brassiere, there is now an effort being made toward growing bosoms. What to do? Swinging Indian clubs will bring results, but lazy girls won't do that. Gentle massage at night with lanolin or cocoabutter is recommended. Also alcohol rubs and cold showers. Hands mustn't be chilled; water directly from the cold water tap must be sprayed upon the chest.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

An Unusual Squeeze Situation

It would seem that when a player at the Contract table holds no card higher than the Ten, he should at least be safeguarded against a squeeze. The extreme paucity of his honor strength ought somehow, by the law of compensation, to safeguard his meager holdings. However, in the hand below, which was played recently in Cleveland, O., by Mr. John H. Law, holding the East hand, he found the method on the seventh trick of squeezing the South player, whose Ten-spot represented the defensive hopes of defeating the Slam contract.

East—Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.
North-South not vulnerable.

	♠ 9 ♡ K Q J 7 4 3 ◇ Q 5 ♣ 10 8 5 2
♠ A K Q J 4 ♡ 9 8 ◇ A 7 4 ♣ K Q 9	North West East South	♠ 6 3 ♡ A 10 5 ◇ K J 9 8 ♣ A J 4 3
	♠ 10 8 7 5 2 ♡ 6 2 ◇ 10 6 3 2 ♣ 7 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	2 ♠	Pass	3 N T
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	6 N T
Pass	Pass	Pass

East, with more than 3 honor-tricks, was probably overenthusiastic in his Slam bid, but the choice of the declaration was sound, as against a heart Opening, a Slam could not have been made with spades as trump.

South's opening lead was the club 7, inasmuch as both his long suits had been bid by the opponents. This trick was won in Dummy with the Queen, and the spade Ace led. Mr. Law now decided to feel out the diamond distribution before proceeding with the suit. The Ace was led from Dummy, and the suit returned, North's Queen dropping.

This definitely placed four diamonds in the South hand originally, and probably five spades. If this were true, then South could hold but four cards in clubs and hearts, and thus two additional rounds of clubs must squeeze his holdings. Therefore, East now led a small club to the King in Dummy, and returned to his own hand with the third round of clubs. On this South discarded one of his hearts, but East continued with the lead of the fourth club, and South could see that defense against East winning all the tricks was no longer possible.

He hopelessly discarded his last heart, but East now applied the squeeze by laying down the Ace of hearts. South now was forced to choose between the discard of a spade and a diamond. Either one left him unable to defend the hand.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper, inclosing a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

Today's Question

♠ 9 8 7 2 ♡ A Q 3 ◇ 10 9 8 ♣ 10 9 7

Answer—No. The correct response is one notrump. The hand contains 1½ honor-tricks and but 2 playing-tricks in support of spades because of the poor distribution.

Household Hints

Regular tire patches can be used successfully to patch rubber soled sport shoes that have become worn. First clean the sole, and then cut a patch larger than the hole and paste over it.

Save that large paper bag when the groceries arrive. It will come in most handy when you are looking around for something into which the dust from the vacuum cleaner may be emptied.

No really neat housekeeper can abide the sight of an open closet door. No matter how attractive she has made the clothes closet with all the new hat and shoe tree devices, and gay cretonne dress covers, the open door gives a room an untidy appearance. But in these days of apartment homes and cabined houses everyone is not so fortunate as to have closets with outside windows. And clothes need air just the same as human beings. Even though one is meticulously careful about placing dirty clothes immediately in the laundry and sending soiled ones to the cleaners, this is not always possible after each wearing of a garment. And one such garment is capable of contaminating a whole wardrobe of fresh clothes. It is well, then, to make the airing of the clothes closet a part of the daily routine. Select a time when there is a fresh breeze blowing through the house, leave the closet door open for 15 or 20 minutes, then be as neat as you wish the rest of the 24 hours.

The Silver Dust Twins Announce

A QUICK, EASY WAY TO WASH DISHES!

New method makes short work of dishwashing

NO WOMAN likes to wash dishes, but since dishes must be washed, we offer you now, for the first time, a quick, easy method—a method that will not harm your hands!

Silver Dust, the remarkable new soap, is now on sale at your grocer's. This soap dissolves as easily as snow. The instant it touches water it bursts into millions of tiny bubbles that quickly surround the particles of dirt and grease and float them away.

So if you would like to cut ⅓ off dishwashing time, by all means use this amazing soap and follow these three simple dishwashing rules: 1—Scrape dishes thoroughly. 2—Use only Silver Dust and hot water in your dishpan. 3—Rinse your dishes, and for quickest results dry them with the famous Silver Dust (Patex) towel that does three times the work of ordinary towels and leaves no lint. Our special offer printed at the right will tell you how you can get these towels free.

If you follow our dishwashing method, the most unpleasant household task is quickly over. And so we urge that you go to your grocer today and get a box of Silver Dust. Use it for dishes. Use it for laundry, too. Notice how quickly it dissolves. Notice what creamy, rich suds it makes and how kind it is to your hands. You'll like its delicate fragrance, too.

HILL HOUSING FINANCED BY U. S. PLANNED

A housing development, probably in the Hill district, financed in the main by a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, is being planned by the Pittsburgh Housing Association, its executive director, John Ihlder, announced today.

A large scale project involving several million dollars and giving work to hundreds through construction of units of small houses for moderate income families is planned, Ihlder declared:

MODERATE RENTALS

The development would cover several blocks now occupied by houses, many condemned years ago, Ihlder pointed out, as unfit for habitation.

Engineers and architects are at work on a survey of the proposed location, shaping plans for houses to rent at $9 to $10 per room per month, or lower—at least 25 per cent under possible rentals of the pre-depression era.

Ihlder refused to reveal the proposed location, lest land prices skyrocket. The entire project will be abandoned, he said, if real estate owners attempt to impose unfair prices.

DEPENDS ON STATE LAW

Ihlder declared that the development depends on two things—passage by the Legislature in January of a bill giving power of condemnation for such projects to the city and the R. F. C. loan.

The condemnation bill sought—called the "right of eminent domain"—would give municipalities the right to condemn property at just prices in favor of housing projects when an especially formed state housing board approved. This power is needed, Ihlder said, to prevent one or two landowners from preventing purchase of sufficient land by asking exhorbitant prices.

Plans and specifications, it is understood, will be prepared by the time the Legislature passes the bill, if it does. Similar bills have already been passed by New York, Ohio and Texas.

Episcopal Synod Sessions End Today

The thirteenth synod of the Province of Washington, Episcopal Church, will close at the final business session this afternoon in Trinity Cathedral. At adjournment, Bishop Philip Cook, of Wilmington, Del., elected yesterday, will assume office as president of the synod.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Frequent Nose-Bleed May Be Due to Serious Causes

At some time or other it is probable you have had a nose-bleed. It may not have amounted to much, or it may have been severe. Whatever it was, I am quite sure the bleeding aroused interest and perhaps alarm in your family.

Dr. Copeland

Nose-bleed is rather a common occurrence and its importance and meaning are often overlooked. When persistent and frequently repeated, it may seriously interfere with good health and body development. In every case, the underlying cause of the disturbance must be determined. Removal of the cause results in cure and promotes normal development and growth.

A common cause of nose-bleed in children is a localized inflammation or ulceration within the nose which the child constantly pokes at and picks. In these cases the ulceration should be treated by a physician and the child should be taught to keep the fingers away from the nose.

A sudden attack of nose-bleed is sometimes caused by change of temperature, by strenuous work or play, severe exertion, or extremely hot weather.

Deformities of the nose, particularly a displacement of the partition between the two sides of the nose, may cause frequent attacks of nose-bleed. Another common yet neglected cause is the presence of nasal polypi—small tumors or growths in the nose that interfere with normal breathing. Polypi can be removed by a simple and painless operation.

Of course an injury such as a blow on the nose results in bleeding, due to rupture of one of the many tiny blood vessels. Certain persons bleed more easily than others. In them, the slightest tap, blow or exertion will stimulate a nose-bleed.

It may be due to a blood disorder, which can only be determined by a blood test and careful physical examination. By tests, the bleeding and clotting time of the blood is determined.

Try not to get excited when a nose-bleed occurs, for excitement will increase the bleeding. It is important to keep as quiet as possible. Avoid exertion and movement.

Keep a cold, wet towel pressed firmly against the nose. If ice is available, the bleeding may be successfully controlled by applying it to the nose. It may be necessary to continue these applications for 30 minutes.

When the clots form do not remove them. Cotton packings may be placed in the nose to control the bleeding. Often they help to form clots, and that is the purpose of the treatment.

Repeated nose-bleeds in children or adults require careful attention. Physical examination should include an examination of the nose, throat, heart and kidneys, and the blood pressure should be taken.

Do not look upon repeated nose-bleed as a trivial matter. The cause may be obscure and difficult to locate. Prompt attention may prevent a serious ailment in later life.

Answers to Health Queries

K. K. Q.—I have sores on my lips. Sometimes they go away and later appear again. Kindly advise me how to prevent them.

A.—These are probably canker sores. They are usually due to hyperacidity. For full particulars restate your question and send a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Charge Republicans Using Mail Carriers

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—A statement issued by the county headquarters of the Democratic party yesterday charged that mail carriers were used "to obtain information apparently to be utilized by the Republican National Committee and a whispering campaign aimed to drive important industries into line for the Republican national ticket."

Boy Lost in Woods Rescued by Posse

OIL CITY, Oct. 20.—Lyle Gunnarson, 13, was telling his school companions a thrilling tale today. Lost four hours in a dense woods near Plumer, he was found at midnight when a campfire he had built to keep himself warm was discovered by a posse that had searched for him for six hours.

WYNN BENEFIT GROUP NAMED

Mayor Charles H. Kline today announced the committee which will stage the benefit broadcast of Ed Wynn over a national hook-up through Sun-Telegraph Radio Station WCAE, from the Nixon Theater, Thursday evening.

The committee, which will turn proceeds of the performance over toto the Welfare Fund, includes Frank J. Chesterman, chairman; A. H. Wilharm, A. B. McSwigan, Mrs. John W. Lawrence, Mrs. Alex Laughlin, Mrs. Enoch Rauh, A. K. Oliver and John Hoehn.

Appearing in Pittsburgh next week in "Laugh Parade," Wynn will make his regular Tuesday broadcast from the Nixon. It will be the first time he has failed to return to New York for his popular program. There will be no performance of "The Laugh Parade" Tuesday. Seats at the theater will be sold for $1, with the exception of eight-chair boxes, which will be sold for $50 at the Nixon Theater and Gimbels.

Assisting Wynn will be Graham MacNamee, in person, and, in the New York studio, Don Voorhees' Orchestra.

Canada Aluminum Adds to Payroll

ARVIDA, Que., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Expansion of aluminum exports has made it possible for the Aluminum Company of Canada to hire another 100 men for its operations here and at Port Alfred, Que., it was announced yesterday. The announcement came as the second shipment of Caucasian crude oil which the Russian government is trading for aluminum was nearing Montreal.

Since July the Aluminum Company has taken on 300 men at its plants.

Road Recalls 120 At Connellsville

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 20.—To release 200 slag-ladened cars of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, which have stood on the tracks near Dickerson Run, 120 men have been recalled to work. Divided in two forces, each force will work three days.

WHITEN TEETH a shade a day

Yellow, stained teeth are not natural. For proof start using Kolynos—a half-inch of this scientific dental cream on a dry brush, twice daily. In 3 days your teeth will look fully 3 shades whiter!

This remarkable dental cream cleans teeth so much whiter than other preparations you've used because it contains two remarkable ingredients. One—the finest cleansing agent known—foams into and cleans out every fissure, removes decay-causing debris, erases ugly tartar and yellow. While the second ingredient kills millions of germs that swarm into the mouth and cause most tooth and gum troubles. Thus the mouth and teeth are quickly cleaned right down to the beautiful, natural white enamel without injury.

Now if you want gleaming white teeth free from decay, and firm, pink gums free from disease start using Kolynos, with its unique Dry-Brush Technique. You'll never regret it. Buy a tube today.

By Way of Remorse

Al Jolson, the champion song entertainer, is soon to return to the microphones, after a two-year absence which cost him about two million dollars.

All because during a broadcast Jolson dropped a few words from a joke that offended numerous tuner-inners and his sponsors. He had no intention of offending anybody. He was nervous, and in his haste to remember his lines, he omitted just four little words that caused all the trouble.

Nifties

Al Schwartz sings it in this way: "Half Pay Days Are Here Again!" . . . A headline in the papers the other day read: "Stocks Soared" . . . Well, who isn't?

Not Guilty!

Izzy Elinson avers that it happened. A car was racing down Vth Ave., ignoring all traffic cues. A motorcycle cop finally overtook it.

"Whadaya think those red lights are for?" growled the cop as he wrote the ticket.

Ah, a Dimmockrat!

"Dear Mr. Winchell," is the affectionate greeting of Chas. Donald Dimmock (a lawyer, yet!) "I note your comments on the forthcoming Republican slogan, i. e., 'Bringing back prosperity is an elephant's job, not a donkey's.' Now I, as a self-appointed spokesman of the Democratic party, thusly reply: 'Oh, yeah! Well, brains and not beef will bring back prosperity, and where there's ivory you'll never find brains!'"

Add Slogans

And Chas. Moran, of Washington, D. C., says:

"The elephant has had the job for years. Now is the time for a 'little horse' sense!"

And loafing on the Courthouse lawn.—Poor John."

"Dear W. W.," writes T. Watkins, of Scranton, "in one of your recent 'Items I Never Met Before' pillars you had: 'That in 24 years a library expert has never known a case of an infectious disease due to germs carried by library books.' How about book-worms?"

STAGE JOTTINGS — Developments in Realm Of Entertainment — AMUSEMENT TIPS

Nice People, Pitt Players, Even Kathryn Meskyl, Who Does Vamps

By GEORGE SEIBEL

When I chatted with Kathryn Meskyl, charming second woman of Edwin Vail's Players, before the "mike" a few days ago, she admitted that she had got on the stage at the age of 11 by false pretense. It seemed to worry her a little bit, like the heroine of the "Emmy Lou" story, who had to cross a pasture infested by fierce and formidable cows. Somebody advised the little girl to pretend she wasn't a bit afraid, and then the cows wouldn't hurt her. "But wouldn't that be deceiving the cows?" asked Emmy Lou of the tender conscience.

Mr. Seibel

Miss Meskyl, like the others of Edwin Vail's company, is as pleasant and respectable a person as you could find in any Sunday school class.

Though she usually has to play bigamous ladies, and wicked vamps, in the shady corner of the triangle, there is nothing frolicsome or temperamental about her.

Whether that's due to being born in Boston or playing 65 weeks in Montreal, it is true. And it's true of Alden Chase, who's a close friend of Paul McGrath, our former leading man. And it's true of all the rest of the delightful people playing in the Pitt Theater.

They wouldn't have time to be wicked if they knew how. Playing 10 times a week, while rehearsing one role and studying another, is not conductive to wild life. .

"OUT OF THE SEA"

Next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Pittsburgh playgoers will have an opportunity to see a striking play that has never been put on outside of London and New York. The Irene Kaufmann Settlement Players, under direction of Louis Isaacs, will present "Out of the Sea," by Don Marquis, one of the few poets who write good plays for the theater.

Don Marquis wrote "The Dark Hours," "The Old Soak," etc., and this appears to be his most serious effort.

The action takes place on the southwest coast of Cornwall, near Land's End, overlooking the sea where the land of Lyonesse sank in the year 1089.

HOLD TO OLD LEGENDS

While the period is the present, the people still cling to the old legends. In the final analysis, the play resolves itself to the triangle of the wife and her lover. It is beautifully written, and the scenes of which there are two for the four acts, are being done elaborately. The effort should be very much worth while.

Meantime other activities in the Little Theater world show that the unprofessional players are aiming high.

The Dracomitra Players announce "Journey's End" as the first production of their fourth season, on October 27 and 28, in the hall of the Mt. Lebanon Baptist Church. This well-known war play by R. C. Sherriff will be directed by Dr. H. Ward Ewalt, with Miss Olive Brown assisting.

The Sewickley Valley Hospital Cot Club will produce Robert E. Sherwood's "The Queen's Husband" on October 27 in the Edgeworth Club.

All of these activities should be an incentive to return from the green fields of Broadway, for which I depart at the close of this paragraph, to see what's new on the Rialto

In Lead

Dorothy Wilson, the girl who left a stenographer's desk for movie acting, plays the leading role in "Age of Consent," film coming to the Sheridan Square Saturday.

'Sanctuary' Will Star Miriam Hopkins

Paramount today announced the purchase of William Faulkner's successful novel, "Santuary," in which Miriam Hopkins will be featured after her engagement with Clark Gable in "No Man of Her Own." The story is highly emotional, recounting the dramatic experience of a girl in a Tennessee mountain community. No director nor supporting cast have been named to date.

Joyce Compton Joins Paramount Cast

Joyce Compton, red-haired screen leading woman, has joined the supporting cast which Paramount is assembling to work with sixteen personalities in "If I Had a Million." Miss Compton will work in scenes with Gary Cooper, Jack Oakie and Roscoe Karns. The young actress made her first talking picture hit with Clara Bow in "The Wild Party," and has had leading roles in "Up Pops the Devil," "Lady and Gent," "Lightnin'," and "The Sky Hawk."

Skipworth and Young Assigned Roles

Alison Skipworth and Roland Young are to be co-featured in "Good Company," an original story written especially for the Paramount character actress by Nina Wilcox Putnam.

Earthquake in Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

First pictures of the destruction wrought by the recent earthquake in Greece, in which more than 300 persons lost their lives, are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, showing in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. Hundreds of women and children, left homeless by the disaster, are shown being fed by the relief workers, while doctors and nurses care for the wounded.

Highlights of President Hoover's speech in Cleveland are presented. The crowd of 30,000 persons that filled the hall frequently interrupt the Republican standard-bearer with applause as he pleads for support in his battle for re-election.

The parting of little Crown Prince Michael of Rumania from his mother, Princess Helen, the divorced wife of King Carol, is a touching bit of royal drama. The pictures show the former Queen and her son, the former King, arriving at the pier in Dover, England, where the channel steamer waits to depart with the little prince.

Thrills from the latest big gridiron battles show Dartmouth's defeat by Pennsylvania and Purdue winning over Wisconsin. More than 50,000 fans witnessed Penn's victory in Philadelphia.

Roughriders give New York a thrill at the opening performance of the rodeo in Madison Square Garden, which performance was given for the benefit of the Mrs. William Randolph Hearst Free Milk for Babies Fund.

Remains

Loretta Young is in "Life Begins," which, in the Davis Saturday, will begin its second week downtown.

Sylvia Sydney, Raft Get New Film

Sylvia Sidney and George Raft will be teamed in the screen play of Vina Delmar's story, "Pick Up." Miss Sidney won her greatest stage triumph in "Bad Girl," another story by Miss Delmar. This will mark the first co-assignment for the two young players, both of whom have won film prominence in less than two years.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Although there will be no reserved seats sold for the Ed Wynn radio broadcast from the stage of the Nixon at 9:30 o'clock next Tuesday night, there will be a seat for every ticket purchaser, Harry Brown, manager of the Nixon, assures. There will be no admissions sold beyond the seating capacity of the house. As previously stated, all money received through this public broadcast of the popular stage comedian and radio artist will go to the Welfare Fund for relief of the unemployed. Mr. Wynn's current show, "The Laugh Parade," in Washington this week, will be presented here with Elsa Ersi, from European music halls, and Earl Oxford in support of the star. Another prominent member of the company will be Jack Powell, comedy blackface drummer.

Ella Ethridge, who played the flighty Emmy in "As Husbands Go," in the Pitt recently, will portray another light-headed dame in "The Vinegar Tree," next week's comedy vehicle for the Edwin Vail Players. In this play she will have the lead role, created by Mary Boland, and the flapper daughter will be acted by Shirley Booth.

* * *

Vivienne Osborne, featured player of the films, will be seen as a full-fledged star in "Tars And Feathers," to be directed by James Cruze . . . "Carry Nation," play by Frank McGrath, an actor, will make its Broadway bow October 29 . . . Ernst Lubitsch will sail for Europe on the same date, expecting to be back in Hollywood in February . . . Constance Collier and Conway Tearle will be members of the cast to present "Dinner At Eight," new comedy by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, in New York Saturday night.

Nancy Link to Dance In Show Boat

Nancy Link, 21, specialty dancer of the movies, will open a week's engagement in the Show Boat, Friday, Joe Hiller, manager of the Show Boat, announced today. The dancer, who lives at 812 South Aiken avenue, filed suit for divorce this week from Billy Link, Jr., of Hollywood, also described as being "in the movies." Following her Show Boat engagement, Mrs. Link will resume her work in the Hollywood studios, Mr. Hiller says.

BITS OF LIFE

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

"SAD SAM," writes Eddie F. from behind the bars of San Quentin, "was the hottest man in town.

"He was hotter than Hades in August, hotter than a five-alarm fire, hotter than an Eskimo at the Equator. He was blazing.

"Sam was the boss mobster of a big time gang of hoodlums in a western city. But he had crossed his own boys. He had squealed to the coppers to save his own skin. And the boys were gunning for him. He couldn't miss. He was marked for death.

"Sad Sam knew his days were chalked up as he sat in his shabby hideaway room and cluttered up the floor with greedily consumed cigarets.

"Sam knew he couldn't beat the rap. They had to catch up with him. He could lam the town, but he'd have to get to the terminal. And he knew if he set foot on the street there would be the jittery clatter of machine guns and he would hurry to join his ancestors.

"He sat there for three days. Every time the stairs creaked he thought death walked the threadbare carpet. Every time a car backfired his heart pounded wildly. Every time the downstairs telephone rang he expected to hear a familiar and sinister voice growl his death warrant.

"Sad Sam was a nervous wreck. He wondered about his girl, Nanny, a taffy-haired, wide-hipped blues singer who chanted her wails of unrequited love in a roadhouse on the soiled fringe of town.

"But Nanny wasn't giving him a tumble. She knew her sugar poppy was slated to get the skids. And she was right on the make for another bankroll. This time it was a lieutenant of police who had the bootlegging concession in a prosperous section of the town.

"Vague, unhappy thoughts skipped through his fright-saddled brain as though he were sucking them from an opium pipe. His wife . . . Millie . . . A fat and wholesome girl . . . Black, satiny hair . . . White skin . . . Good to look at. But fat. What did she think about him? he wondered. She, too, knew her man was shooting craps with loaded dice.

"Millie? Millie was buzzing attorneys to find out how much money her hubby had cached for a rainy day. A day, such as was approaching, when the dark sky would rain blood.

"The coppers. The coppers didn't care. They jeered about the alleged tough guy, Sad Sam, the bad man, the two-gun guy who killed men with the emotions of a machine. Sad Sam, the guerrilla, who had wept secrets and sent one of his boys to the chair when the detectives had slapped his face.

"His child. Healthy Tony. Chubby. Intelligent. Black-eyed. Sombre, and always asking questions about what his father did. What was Tony doing?

"For a week Sad Sam hid from his terrible destiny. The mound of cigaret butts grew. He was sallow. Jumpy. Afraid to be alone. Afraid to look at the sun. Afraid to lift the curtain to see the stars. He teetered on the brink of insanity.

"Finally he could stand it no longer. He'd have to leave town. He had plenty of bucks in his pocket. Ran up into five figures. He'd sneak off to the terminal—get the first train out. Once on the train he figured he would be safe. No taxis. No cars. Too dangerous. Another car driving up alongside—and final curtain.

"He slipped down the boarding house stairs. And stepped cautiously into the street. Not a soul in sight. He marched down. Under the trees, their shadows protecting him. Into the heart of the town. He was playing hookey from the grave. The crowd hurried past him. The lights of the station shone like happily beckoning beacons.

"He just had to cross Main St. The terminal. Gimme a ticket for the next train out. To Anywhere. To Nowhere. To Here. To There. As long as she chugged out into the night—away from this town that was his living tomb.

He stepped off the curb. Traffic was thick. He dodged cars.

"Suddenly a woman screamed. Hysterically, frantically, shrilly.

"'Look out!'

"Sad Sam knew the deal was over. The gunners had caught up with him. He mumbled a furtive prayer to a strange God. A God he had forgotten.

"He darted to the side and flung himself flat on his face in a final protective gesture. He fell into the path of a car. He was killed instantly.

"The hottest man in town had killed himself. The woman had screamed at her child who had toddled out into the street.

"And it's so. The police records of a certain town will show it. Irony? I'll say. I happen to be one of the guys Mr. Sam squealed on" . . .

"I DON'T KNOW whether you're interested in stories of children," writes Mrs. Frank Williams, of Milwaukee, Wis. "Sometimes I don't think you're quite the type. But this one, which concerns my own kiddies, seems good enough to forward to you. If you don't like it, there's no harm done.

"Joan is nine—and Frankie is seven. They're as unlike as any two children you ever met. Joan's a vivacious child. She's always riding a bicycle, roller skating, or playing some sort of game with the neighborhood children.

"But Frankie is—well, he's different. He's a good boy, and very sharp. But he doesn't give a hang about bicycles, games or the other children. In fact, his main delight seems to be sitting on the curb and watching the automobiles whizz by. What goes on in his mind, I have no idea. But I'm not worried about him in the least.

"The other morning, as I watched him from the window, the postman delivered some mail to the house next to ours and then stopped to talk to Frankie. The window was open and I could hear every word that passed between them.

"'Well,' said the postman, 'how are you today, Frankie?'

"My boy took his time about replying.

"'Fine,' he finally replied abruptly.

"The postman evidently decided to do a little teasing.

"'Say, Frankie,' he said, 'what makes you so different from your sister? Look how she rides a bicycle and plays games. How come she can do these things better than you?'

"Again the boy took his time.

"'I don't know,' he said. 'But I do know that there's one thing I can do better than her.'

"'What's that?' asked the postman.

"Frankie arose and started toward the house.

"'I can mind my own business,' he snapped!" . . .

Ex-Cowboy's Rodeo Ended by Motorist

HARRISBURG, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Donning his 10-gallon hat and twirling his six-shooter, Frank Bowers, 62-year-old former cowboy, last night stalked to the middle of a Royalton street and began sending bullets at pedestrians and motorists.

No vigilantes ended his demonstration. Instead, a motorist ran him down while six men disarmed him. His leg was fractured. He will be given a mental test.

Predicts Lutheran Unity in 10 Years

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Complete unity of all Lutheran bodies in the United States is possible within the next decade, the Rev. Dr. F. H. Knubel, of New York, president of the United Lutheran Church in America, predicted here. He told friends he knew of nothing to prevent such a consolidation, as the church convention closed yesterday.

Three Women -:- By Faith Baldwin

Mother Resentful Because Of Devotion Between Baby and Father

When the neat, unflattering dress had settled about her, she walked toward the door, said briefly, "I shall be in my room," and vanished.

Left alone, Henrietta put the new gown away and stopped to pick up scattered pins and bits of thread. Her rusty black silk, made in an earlier fashion than that of 1885, creaked about her as she moved, stiffly and wearily, about her duties. The sewing room was cluttered with materials of silk and satin and mohair in the darker colors with muslins and linens in white. There was very little furniture and what there was had all the resigned ugliness of relegated things. Henrietta thought with longing of her narrow bed in the hall bedroom on the top floor which had been assigned to her, to which she had come at the time of Louisa's marriage, three years ago. If she could go up there now and lie down for a little while! Henrietta had sewed late the night before, Louisa desired the dress.

But Louisa disliked that any in her household should be idle.

Henrietta thought — the baby will be coming in soon—she will never notice—and, so thinking, slipped out of the door and up the stairs, a guilty creature, her 40 years as burdensome as 60 upon her thin, bent shoulders.

BECOMES APPREHENSIVE

In her own bedroom, Mrs. Sheldon sat in a Boston rocker and read a chapter in the Old Testament. The bedroom was very large. It was filled with massive furniture, the windows were curtained with heavy velvet hangings, draped over stiff lace. On the papered walls were steel engravings and some colored prints of 20 years earlier. The house to which her husband had brought her from her home in Boston had altered very little since his late parents' time.

In the center of the room loomed the appallingly hideous double bed, bolstered and counterpaned whitely.

She read her chapter, but not with perfect concentration. Her eyes traveled frequently to any one of the three gilt or marble clocks which ticked serenely in the room, each marking a slight difference in time. She frowned, her slippered foot tapped impatiently upon the drugget footstool. Then the frown passed and deep lines of apprehension etched themselves suddenly, from the sharp, imperious nose to the straight corners of her mouth.

Had—had anything — happened?

Her heart leaped, almost stopped. A darkly crimson flush followed — subsided — left her normal pallor. She rose, set the Bible aside, and began to walk up and down the room.

COMFORTED BY BIBLE

Her thoughts, which she fancied prayers, were demands, denials, bargainings.

She returned to her chair, opened her Bible at the Psalms, and read steadily. Something of comfort and certainty flowed back into her secret being. These noble and reassuring words had been written for her.

Below stairs, the street door opened and closed again. It was the sound for which she had waited, praying. Thus swiftly are the petitions of the righteous answered. She sat quite still, having heard it plainly, and her spirit ran down the stairs, arms wide in welcome. She smiled a little, and listened for Nanna's youthful step, rendered cautious by the living weight she would carry. Then, leaning a little forward, her ears were sharpened to hear the first sound of a voice which as yet knew few words.

They did not reach her, the sounds for which she waited. Instead, another step, one which she knew as well but welcomed not at all—a tread heavy and unhesitant. A man's footfall.

Mrs. Sheldon laid the Book away and sat with her hands folded on her lap. Her face clouded with irritation. Should Nanna bring the baby to her now, half the anticipated delight were gone. George would be here, claiming his share, crass and loud-voiced, tossing the child in his strong arms until the boy crowed and gasped with laughter.

The boy loved his father.

A COOL RECEPTION

The door opened. George Sheldon came in. He was sweating frankly in his thick, black clothes. Across an increasing waistline the gold watch-chain was taut, weighted with seals. His fresh-colored face beamed upon her impatience, he passed a conscious hand over the tended luxuriance of his beard, and advanced upon her, smiling.

"Well, Louisa?"

She regarded him quietly.

"You are early, George."

He came closer to her, pinched the large, flat lobe of her ear, pulled downward with a gold and onyx earring, and stooped to kiss her. She turned a cool cheek to the approaching warmth of his mouth. Sheldon remarked, with a vexed, slightly embarrassed laugh, "You don't overwhelm a man with welcome, Louisa!"

She let it pass and repeated her first statement, "You are home early."

"Yes," he replied, the momentary annoyance forgotten. He sat down, stretched and crossed his long, heavy legs. "Yes. I had luncheon at the Astor House with Isham and some others. We sat there late. There was very little for me to do at the office. Simmons is breaking in well—a smart, young man. Later, I looked in at the club and then came home."

ASKS ABOUT INFANT

His silence added "to you." She did not appear to notice it.

"And the baby?" he asked, yawning.

"He has not come in as yet. I am beginning to grow alarmed."

"Alarmed?" he interrupted. "It's a superb day. No doubt Nanna planned to keep him out later than usual. You fret too much over the boy, Louise. If you keep on you'll make a milksop of him. Once weaned, you know, he's on the road to manhood."

Thinking back upon her son's early months, her hard, controlled face softened. There was a faint gleam of beauty about her at that moment. Sheldon, looking at her, dimly realized that it was a beauty he had never evoked. He wondered, for the thousandth time, why he had married the eldest of old Lennox's daughters. Thirty, Louisa had been at the time they had married. An age, for an unwedded woman! To be sure, the match, as such, had been good; family and money on both sides. He'd met the Lennoxes that summer in Massachusetts, and had been much taken with the youngest girl—a volatile, dark thing, a coquette. Gad, she'd been sweet, the little Emmeline! But that had come to nothing.

TURNED TO LOUISA

There had been a point where Louisa had stepped in, when emotionally worn by the chase Emmeline had set him, he had turned gratefully to the cool remoteness of the older woman. Yet Emmeline had liked him, he had been certain of that. The other man had grown insistent, she could not make up her mind. Sheldon had been thankful for Louisa's intervention. She hadn't, of course, realized how clearly she had revealed the instability, the almost perilous coquetry of her little sister. She had sympathized with him, merely, had let a word fall now and then, illuminating Emmeline for him, her unsuitability as the wife of a solid citizen.

Well, she'd married the other man, had Emmeline. And shortly after, Sheldon had married Louisa. Now, Emmeline was dead in childbirth, her laughing eyes closed, her white hands mouldering to dust.

Louisa managed his household perfectly, she had borne him a son.

The street door closed again. Nanna panted up the stairs, her arms laden. They could hear her make-believe scolding.

"Such a heavy boy . . . such an armful. Poor old Nanna! Well, never mind, it won't be long before he trots up on his own two legs, bless his little heart."

Louisa sat still. George went to the door, flung it wide.

"Bring Lennox in here, Nanna."

NURSE REPRIMANDED

Nanna, black-haired, rosy aproned, and starched, appeared on the sill. In her arms Lennox Sheldon brooded, sleepily. But his blue eyes opened and danced as he saw his father. He put out fat arms, essayed a word.

Nanna set him down upon white-booted and tasseled feet. He staggered in through the doorway, hampered by his petticoats. Nanna had released him from the ornate bonnet and coat he so hated. Now he stood there in a blue-sashed dress, his dark hair roached, one curl running from brow to crown, a little tunnel of dusky silk.

Lennox stumbled. His mother's breath caught inaudibly as Sheldon stooped, swung the baby into his arms, tossed him high. Nanna beamed from the hall.

Mrs. Sheldon asked, severely, "Where were you? It is long past his hour."

"If you please, Mrs. Sheldon, m'am, we went for a ride on the 'bus. The baby was so eager-like — when he saw the horses he—"

"That will do. You knew that I would not permit such an innovation. Do not let it happen again, Nanna."

She dismissed the nurse with a gesture. 'Bus! Her child crowded in with unclean people, people with heaven knew what diseases. Her heart was tight with anger.

Nanna, subdued, departed.

HUSBAND DISMISSED

Lennox smiled at her, frowned at her, burrowed his curly head in his father's neck. George Sheldon was not without his mean little triumph in that moment.

"Put him down," Louisa ordered sharply. "You will only upset him, tossing him about in that manner."

Her eyes added — will you never go?

After a minute she said, casually, "Some letters came for you this morning. I had Rogers put them in the library, on your desk."

Sheldon recognized and accepted his dismissal. He set the child on his wife's knees and went from the room.

Louisa's arms closed about him, she rocked him, gently. She murmured, "Hush—hush."

Presently he was distracted by a gleam of gold at her bodice. He investigated, tugged, was rewarded by a watch, listened, rapt, to the whispered tick, and smiled happily again.

In her controlled caresses there was something terrible, ominous, a portent—anf if she desired to crush the pliant body to her, devour the child wholly. About the two of them, the quiet pair which might have sat as a picture of maternal love and innocent infancy, a dark aura hung; the air was as if shadowed by dark, invisible wings.

She asked him, in her heart—Why do you love him so much? You are my creation; you belong to me—to me.

Her glance traveled from his dark crested head, now lying drowsily against her breast, from the pink thumb stuck in the corner of a pinker mouth, around the hushed room. Upon the carpet George's glove lay where he had dropped it. Like a mute challenge. Her eyes rested a moment upon the unlightened inevitability and solemnity of the double bed. Turning back to the child, her gaze held a recognition of recompense. She rocked him, singing in a high voice, true and unmusical. The shadows deepened. Nanna crept to the door, listened, and moved away again, waiting.

A COLD PASSES THRU 3 STAGES!

It is Twice as Easily Stopped in the First as in the Second or Third Stages!

A cold passes through three stages—the Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days; and the Mucous Secretion Stage. Once it gets beyond the Dry Stage it is far more difficult to relieve. Therefore, treat a cold promptly.

The best thing you can take is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine, because it does the four things necessary, in the way required. It opens the bowels. Kills the germs and fever in the system. Relieves the headache and grippy feeling. Tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

This is the relief you want—complete, thorough and decisive! Trust to nothing less.

Effective as it is, Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is absolutely safe to take. No narcotics. No bad after-effects of any kind. Relief with comfort! The whole world knows Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine as the standard cold tablet. Comes in handy, pocket-size box, cellophane-wrapped. Get it at any drug store. There is nothing "just as good."

Grove's LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE

"so tired"..."no strength"

you dare not be "half-well"

—pause a moment and reason in a common-sense way what may be the cause of that tired feeling and its relation to the blood

Is your body receiving full benefit of all the oxygen you breathe?

Every human body in its vital processes needs so much oxygen every minute. Nature has arranged for this by a delicate system of balances.

Every minute the lungs take in so much oxygen from the air, the heart forces so much blood into the lungs, and the hemoglobin in the red-cells of the blood pick up this oxygen and take it to the various parts of the body where it is needed in the vital processes by which the body is nourished and given energy. Normally, and in health, the system is thus supplied with just the amount of oxygen it needs.

You know what happens if the air is shut off from your lungs so that you do not get enough oxygen into them. You stifle, you sicken, and if enough is shut off, you die.

If the heart fails to send enough blood to the lungs to take up the oxygen, you know how serious that is. How the lungs pant to get more oxygen in to compensate for the slowing down of the blood supply!

The thing which you may not know is that the amount of oxygen the blood can take up and carry away from the lungs depends on the number of red-blood-cells and the hemoglobin which they contain.

If you suffer from a deficiency of hemoglobin—low blood count or low red-cell count it is commonly called—the supply of oxygen to the blood is diminished just as effectually as if you had shut off the air supply to the lungs, or as if you suffered from heart disease. Nature strives to compensate against a deficiency of hemoglobin, as it does against an impaired heart action.

It pays to keep the red-blood-cells and their hemoglobin content up to normal.

SCIENCE tells us that overwork, worry, colds, sickness and diet neglect frequently reduce the red-cells and the hemoglobin content of the blood—and when these are reduced the body and mind are not normal.

The reason of this is that the hemoglobin—in the red-cells of the blood—acts as a carrying agent. It takes up the vital oxygen in the lungs and conveys it to all parts of the body—even to the skin—and brings the accumulated body poison back to the lungs to be thrown off.

Think what this means to you

With the right amount of hemoglobin in your red-blood-cells, your body will have the benefit of more of the vital and purifying oxygen and the poisonous carbon dioxide will be more rapidly thrown off.

Oxygen in the blood . . . organs . . . tissues . . . is so necessary for the proper conversion of nourishment into body heat, energy, muscle tone, tissue repair and for giving vitality to the disease-resisting cells of the body.

S.S.S. builds up the blood

S.S.S., in addition to being a valuable general tonic, has the special property of increasing red-cells and restoring hemoglobin content of the blood, when deficient.

Remember, your system may not have run down in a day or week—such a condition is usually a gradual process—and time may be needed to repair the damage done. S.S.S. is usually effective from the start . . . and as it increases your red-cells . . . and restores your hemoglobin . . . you will begin to feel better . . . look better.

Furthermore, S.S.S. promotes a keen appetite and improves digestion—so necessary in food assimilation.

Proved by scientific tests

A distinctive thing about S.S.S. is that it is made from fresh roots, barks and herbs . . . and being in liquid form it is readily absorbed by the system. It will not interfere with any other treatment you may be taking. Its efficacy has been proved by scientific tests and by use for more than 100 years.

Try S.S.S. yourself. Get it from any drug store. In two sizes: regular and double—the latter is more economical and is sufficient for a two weeks' treatment. It may be the means of bringing better health and more happiness to you. Then why not begin the S.S.S. course of treatment today? Insist on S.S.S.—the proven blood tonic.

PITT ON EDGE FOR BUCKS

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Reider Plays Big Part. | Baseball Coaches Shift.
District Boys Aid Ohio. | McCoy Lauds DeForest.

CAPTAIN OPENS WAY FOR HELLER'S RUN

CAPT. PAUL REIDER has not featured in any of the Pitt games to date, as far as the headlines were concerned, but he really played a major part in the victory over Army. Reider was out of commission when the Panthers met West Virginia and Duquesne, and he did not play much more than half time against the Cadets, but one important play he was very valuable. The Army ends gave Pitt trouble all afternoon, and the various men assigned to take them out found the task a difficult one. When Pitt went into the double wing-back formation, however, Reider got a crack at the bothersome end, and he kept that gentleman so tangled up that Warren Heller breezed right by and continued on for a touchdown. It was Reider who made the 54-yard run possible. He does a lot of things that do not appear in the accounts of Panther games.

Paul Reider

Reider, a sensational pass receiver, has had difficulty in getting into the open. Against the Cadets usually he was obstructed by some husky Soldier assigned to that task by the Army strategy board, and by the time Paul could wriggle loose the pass would be either grounded or knocked down by a defensive man. The Panther captain figures on getting loose some day, and when he does the chances are at least even that he will find a football, thrown by Heller, hanging in the air above his head.

HIS RETENTION HAVING been long assured, the signing of George Gibson to a contract to manage the Pirates against next year was a mere formality that caused no commotion in baseball circles anywhere.

Gibson accomplished one of the cleverest managerial feats recorded in baseball last season in taking a club that had been picked for nothing better than fifth place and finishing second with it, narrowly missing the pennant. No skipper ever more convincingly earned the right to be kept on the job.

A QUERY COMES from G. F. M. and W. A. C. of Charleroi, as to whether Marchy Schwartz or Joe Savoldi made the first touchdown for Notre Dame against Pitt here in 1930.

Schwartz made Notre Dame's first touchdown on the first play from scrimmage after the Irish gained possession of the ball. It was a 60-yard run on the famous "going home" play, Savoldi was not in the lineup at the start of the game.

REPORTS OF THE preparations of Ohio State for the meeting with Pitt at the Stadium Saturday continue to indicate more and more strongly that the two products of this district in the Buckeye line—Regis Monahan, of Greenfield, and Joe Gailus, of Vandergrift, both of whom came out of Kiski—will make lots of trouble for the Panthers. Gailus, weighing 192, is a veteran right guard who even last year was a Big Ten standout, and Monahan, playing at his side and scaling 206, has been a great success at plugging one of the holes caused by the loss of Haubrich and Bell, last year's great tackles. Already Regis is rated one of the best tackles in the Middle West. He and Gailus are pronounced hard, fierce, smashing forwards, extremely aggressive and splendidly efficient. It was the charging and blocking of this great pair that made it possible for Ohio State to gain almost 150 yards against Michigan last Saturday, and the Buckeyes rarely hit outside the tackles. The two ripped big holes in the left side of the Michigan wall, through which the Ohio backs poured for steady gains in the third and fourth periods, though the advances generally were checked inside the 20-yard line.

THE LAST TWO winters witnessed an unusual number of changes in the coaching ranks of the major baseball leagues, and if early signs are not misleading an even bigger shakeup in the same department may be looked for before the 1933 season arrives.

With Dave Bancroft dropped by the Giants, no fewer than five coaches already have been cast adrift, all in the National League. The others to draw their releases were Ivan Olson, of the Giants; Clyde Wares, of the Cardinals; Jack Onslow, of the Phillies, and John Corriden, of the Cubs.

Dave Bancroft

NONE OF THE vacancies has yet been filled, though it is understood that Ray Blades will succeed Wares and that Herb Hunter will take the place of Onslow.

There may be additional changes later when Joe Cronin in Washington and the new manager in Cincinnati begin to shape up their forces. Pittsburgh is among the clubs likely to stand pat.

AS FAR AS the minor leagues are concerned, the name of no other manager can be placed higher than that of Spencer Abbott on any list of exceptional pennant-winning pilots. Abbott's success in leading Portland to the Pacific Coast League flag this year added another triumph to a long string. Spencer never has managed a big league club, but his record in the minors is a standout. In 23 years as a shipper he has piloted 15 different clubs in 10 different leagues. He has won eight pennants, finished second six times, third four times and fourth once, failing only four times to land in the first division. He is 55 years old and started out as a pitcher for Jacksonville in 1900.

ABBOTT CAME UP to the majors only once. The Cubs bought him from Jacksonville, but in the spring of 1901 transferred him to Terre Haute. Though never succeeding in working his own way back to the big show, he developed many other major leaguers.

Among them were Ervin Brame, Pirate pitcher, and Cotton Tierney, ex-Buccaneer infielder. The best known of the others were Larry Benton, Zack Taylor, Moe Berg, Jess Haines, Marty McManus, Andy High, Clyde Manion and Earl Webb.

BECAUSE HE HAD failed to win in two starts, Leon Chagnon, Pirate pitcher, was dropped by the Dover club in the series between picked teams for the championship of New Hampshire, and an American League hurler was taken on in his place.

Kid McCoy

KID M'COY attributes much of the success he gained in the ring to the help he received from the late Jimmy DeForest as a trainer and a second. "Jimmy was always serious about anything he tried," McCoy said. "He studied anatomy and he studied diet. And the things he learned he applied not only to the fighters he trained, but to himself as well. That's why he lived to be 70, when his life had been despaired of in early manhood. DeForest never was a fighter. He was too frail for that. But few men have known more than he about the business. He was a great trainer and a great second." But McCoy, now employed at the Ford automobile factory in Detroit, shook his head when asked if he considered DeForest the greatest trainer he had known. "As far as I am concerned," he replied, "that honor goes to William Muldoon. I learned more from Muldoon than from anyone else."

PILOT SIGNED TO ONE-YEAR CONTRACT

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

With George Gibson signed to a new managerial contract, the Pirate official family today was all set to tackle anything that comes up in a positive manner, Gibby last night affixed his signature to a one-year document.

The terms of the pilot's contract were not made public, but it was felt he was given a substantial increase over his pay of last year. Strict economy is being practised by every owner as a necessary measure, but the boss of the Buccos did a good job with what was supposed to be a mediocre club.

CONFERENCE SHORT

The conference at which Gibson signed for 1933 was very short, in fact the task required but five minutes. The manager and President William E. Benswanger got together just before dinner last evening and the business at hand was disposed of right quickly. After signing, Gibson said:

BOTH SIDES HAPPY

"Nothing pleases me more than to be chosen again to serve as manager of the ball team with which I was associated for so many years. I expect to reside here this winter and attend the coming meetings. It is the desire of the Pittsburgh club to negotiate some trades and we will leave nothing unturned in our efforts to put through a deal or two."

Prexy Benswanger also expressed deep satisfaction over the signing of Gibson.

The Pirate leader yesterday filed application for citizenship papers. Gibby was born in Ontario, Canada.

PILOTS EAGER TO SWAP

Gibson and Bill McKechnie, Braves' manager, revealed to members of the Variety Club yesterday that both were anxious to swap players. The two big league pilots were among the speakers at the weekly luncheon of the club.

McKechnie disclosed he had just held a session with Owner Charles A. Stoneham, of the New York Giants, relative to a possible exchange of athletes. McKechnie, however, declared he knew nothing of any four-cornered deal. It had been reported the Braves and the Giants were mixed in an expected grand change with two other teams.

NEW BASEBALL LOOP FORMED

MINNNEAPOLIS, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Organization of the Northern Baseball League, a new circuit, was completed at a meeting here yesterday.

Eight clubs will be in the league, including Little Falls, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Hibbing and Duluth, Minn.; Grand Forks, N. D.; Eau Claire, Wis., and Brainerd or Crookston, Minn.

A schedule will be drawn upon after the American Association has mapped its season's program. The Northern League wishes to avoid conflict with the Association's dates in the Twin Cities.

R. L. Voelz, of Minneapolis, is the league's president and Bruno Haas, St. Paul, former American Association outfielder, secretary-treasurer.

The Red Lights continue to show the way in the Police Traffic Division Bowling Congress with a record of eight matches won and none loss. The One Way Streets are in second place with seven victories and one defeat.

Bingham and Keller are tied for the high individual score for one game with marks of 200. For three games, Keller has a record of 514 and sports an average for the season to date of 152.

The Glaring Lights have a high team total of 708 and the One Way Streets a three-game total of 2009 and a high average of 637.

High School Drops Football After One Injury

LEMONT, Ill., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—One injury has prompted Lemont to drop football for the rest of the season, perhaps forever.

John Cafferty fractured his left arm last Saturday as the Lemont High School team defeated Plainfield, 20 to 0. That was enough. The rest of the games were canceled.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: PHENOMENAL HEARING—Esteban (Istvan) Janky, the Hungarian boy, possesses auditory organs so excessively developed that it enables him to hear the proverbial drop of a pin. A pin hitting the floor in the midst of a noisy gathering within 60 feet from where Istvan may be standing will affect him in the manner of an alarm clock. At 150 feet he can distinguish every word of a quiet conversation. At 300 feet he still can distinguish sounds normally indistinguishable.

LUTHER TAKES PRO TITLE

By TOM BIRKS

Ted Luther, popular professional of the Valley Heights Country Club, is the 1932 Tri-State Professional Golfers' Association champion. Luther won the title yesterday over the links of the Fox Chapel Golf Club, defeating Perry Del Vecchio, defending champion from the Greensburg Country Club, 1 up, in one of the greatest 36-hole match play finals ever staged in this district.

Del Vecchio was not able to stand the strain as well as Luther, and missed many shots, especially during the afternoon round.

PERRY TAKES LEAD

Perry was one under par on the outward nine of the morning round to make the turn, leading 1 up. Luther squared the match on the fourteenth. Del Vecchio won the fifteenth, but Ted took the eighteenth to go to lunch all square. Both had 74s for their morning medal scores.

Luther was 2 up at the turn in the afternoon, but Del Vecchio was far from being counted out. He reduced Luther's lead on the long twenty-eighth and then squared the match on the thirty-first green.

Luther won the thirty-second and thirty-third holes. Ted had a chance to finish the match on the thirty-fourth green. Del Vecchio missed his second shot and took two putts for a 5. Luther was on in two, but proceeded to take three putts and the match was dormie.

LUTHER RALLIES

Del Vecchio raised the hopes of his followers when he won the thirty-fifth with a par 3. Both had good drives and great brassies on the home hole. Then Luther half hit his pitch for the green and landed in the trap to the left. Del Vecchio put his third three feet from the pin, but Luther made a brilliant recovery from the trap, landing two feet from the cup.

TECH TO HEAD WEST TONIGHT

Carnegie Tech's varsity football squad, 30 strong, will entrain late tonight for South Bend, and the scene of its Saturday conflict with unbeaten and unscored-on Notre Dame. The Tartans will wind up their heavy work this afternoon, and board their sleeping coaches at 10 p. m.

They will arrive in South Bend early tomorrow morning, and go by bus to Niles, Mich., where they will remain in seclusion until tomorrow afternoon when a loosening-up drill is scheduled at the Notre Dame Stadium.

THIRTY ON SQUAD

The entire available varsity strength is to make the trip, including Ray Tesser, injured right end, who will be unable to play.

The following players will go: Centers—Jones, Dreshar and Seigal; guards — Sample, Burzio, Heinzer, Kebe and Anderson; tackles—Croft, Forsman, Nutter, Plummer, Croissant and Doloway; ends—Stewart, Tesser, Ostrosky, Burns and Goodridge; halfbacks—Kavel, Sayles, Spisak, Coulter, Brewer and Carlson; fullbacks—Mihm and O'Toole; quarterbacks—McCurdy, Dueger and Bevevino.

Graduate Manager Overend, Head Coach Bob Waddell, Trainer Bert Munhall, Student Manager Cadmus, two assistant managers Equipment Manager Dinger and several newspaper men will increase tonight's party to 40.

SAMPLE DOUBTFUL

Co-Capt. Sample still is being held out of practice and hope has about been given up that he will start.

Carnegie's Kiltie Band, cheerleaders and many of the students and alumni will follow the team tomorrow night on a special train that will leave Pittsburgh at 11:30.

Boilermakers Out To Set New Scoring Mark

Notre Dame scored in 35 consecutive games from 1919 until the Army broke the string late in 1922. Purdue tied the record last week in scoring against Wisconsin and can break it Saturday.

COLLEGE GRID GATES DROP

NEW YORK, Oct 20.—(AP.)—That the football public is getting choosey about its games and even the enthusiastic "old grad" wants his money's worth when he goes back for a game is indicated in reports of a general decrease in attendance at college contests this season.

Reports from all over the country show declines of from 10 to 50 per cent from last year's figures and gate receipts falling off even more. Many colleges plan further reductions in the hope of bringing out the crowds, but a few instances of increased attendance show that the crowds are still there when the games are good or a team is having a better than usual season.

While the East, the Mid-West, the Rocky Mountain district and parts of the South have produced few big crowds, Stanford, Utah, Auburn, North Carolina State, Duke and a few other colleges report general gains.

The game appears to be the thing although reduced prices have aided in some instances.

Southern California-Loyola	55,000
California-St. Mary's	52,000
Pennsylvania-Dartmouth	50,000
Michigan-Northwestern	45,000
Ohio State-Michigan	42,000
Columbia-Princeton	35,000
Yale-Brown	30,000
Oregon-Washington	27,000
Yale-Chicago	25,000
Stanford-Santa Clara	25,000
Texas-Oklahoma	23,000
Northwestern-Illinois	22,000
Tennessee-Alabama	21,000
Pitt-Army	20,000

GROVERS MEET JACKETS

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Oct. 20.—Sharing honors with the powerful University of Pittsburgh eleven as being the only two undefeated clubs in the district, the Waynesburg College football team will be "on the spot" in its homecoming day game here Saturday afternoon with Grove City College.

With the scalps of Penn State, Muskingum, Slippery Rock and Bethany colleges hanging on their belts, Coach Frank Wolf's warriors will enter Saturday's Tri-State Conference fray determined to keep their slate clean, but with the knowledge that for that very reason the Grove City eleven will come here primed and pointed especially for this clash.

Tri-State Briefs

GROVE CITY, Pa., Oct. 20.—A dazed Grove City squad that is still trying to shake off the effects of the defeat by Westminster in a hard game last week, is looking ahead with misgivings to the Waynesburg clash Saturday. The Grovers are bruised and battered from the hard fray with the Titans, and Amos has had to take things easy in the early drills this week. The Crimson team was held to a 6-6 tie last year by the Yellow Jackets after Frank Wolfe's team had defeated Penn State. Waynesburg's record to date is more impressive than a year ago, while the Grovers have yet to show their class. In the condition the Crimson squad is in today, there is little reason to hope for a victory Saturday.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Oct. 20.—The first day football game at Reeves Stadium this year is scheduled for Saturday afternoon, when the Covenanters welcome Boston University. Geneva's night program came to a close last Friday when St. Vincent was defeated, 14 to 7. Geneva and Boston University entered into football relations last fall at the City of Culture, at which time the Harpster aggregation checked a 7-0 victory. Carson Robbins regular right halfback, is still on the sidelines and has failed to see service in the past two encounters. His ankle may mend to the extent that he can be used this week.

MEADVILLE, Pa., Oct. 20.—The Allegheny College grid team is working hard this week trying to speed up and perfect its running attack. The game at Springfield, Mass., Saturday showed without a doubt that the team has ability hitherto not exhibited. Several finds were made in that game, the most pleasing of which were Art Balser's smart quarterbacking and the general all around ability of Sam McKim, fullback from Wilkinsburg. Slight injuries were injured by Capt. Waite and Pro Robblee. It is expected, however, that these men shall be in good shape by Saturday when Dickinson will be met. In the meantime, Bob Kent has been moved up to fill Knighton Waite's tackle berth. The Meadville boy is beginning to show lots of drive and his promotion is expected to speed up his improvement.

OHIO ELEVEN SURE TO TEST PANTHERS

By JESS CARVER

It is not considered good form to point. Emily Post says so and Emily knows. But these college footballers generally are not up on the niceties of correct behavior, (except when the referee is looking) so pointing has become quite the thing among the varsity gridders.

The penalty of having a good football team is that all your opponents point for you. It is the penalty that Pitt is paying this year, with eight or nine elevens laying back with sucker punches all loaded up to pop at the Panther's whiskers each Saturday afternoon. Greasy Neale had his Mountaineers all set for some Panther tail-twisting, but the Mountaineers grabbed the wrong end of the Pitt Cat. The Dukes were primed, but they didn't know how, and last week, the Army exploded ton after ton of football dynamite under the chin of the Golden Cat and came dangerously close to blowing him out of the league.

BUCKEYES DANGEROUS

This week, it's Ohio State's Buckeyes who hope to hang the old kayo wallop on the locals. The Bucks haven't been able to point to the degree West Virginia, the Dukes and the Army did, for Indiana and Michigan took some of the steam out of the Columbus punch. But it's a punch, nevertheless, and heavy enough to cause damage a'plenty.

The chances are that the Pitts will run smack into their toughest assignment of the season Saturday as they tackle O. S. U. here. It will take the best football the Panthers have to subdue the Big Tenners, whose defeat by Michigan and tie with Indiana have made them victory-hungry. What they won't do Saturday to beat Pitt isn't permitted by the rules.

Coach Sutherland has his team in pretty fair fighting trim for the game. He'll give it a final strenuous workout today. The starting lineup appears set, it being the same that opened the battle with the Army, with the exception of Tiger Walton, who'll play right tackle instead of Bob Hoel. With Joe Tormey still hors de combat, George Shotwell will play center again, a Shotwell who has learned plenty about forward pass defense since last Saturday.

BACKFIELD INTACT

Ted Dailey and Skladany were at the ends; Walton and Cuba at the tackles; Onder and Hartwig at the guards; Shotwell at center and Hogan, Reider, Heller and Weinstock in the backfield for the varsity in yesterday's drill.

The Buckeyes will toss a 190-pound line and a set of hard and fast-running backs at the Panthers Saturday. A couple Buckeye varsity performers are on the injured list and may not be able to perform here, Carl Cramer, quarterback, has a twisted knee and Junius Ferrall, an end, has a bruised leg. The size and strength of the Ohio line may cause the Pitts to unsheath their aerial attack, but then, its easier and quicker to advance the ball by heaving it than by running it and a lot easier on the deck hands.

The Bucks will arrive in town tomorrow morning. Both elevens will drill in the Stadium tomorrow afternoon, the workouts to consist of calesthentics and signal sessions.

The Tipoff

One of the hardest working young men on the Pitt squad this week has been Izzy Weinstock, the sophomore fullbacker. Izzy hasn't been putting in any excessive licks at battering the line or lugging the ball, but he's been swinging his right hoof back and forth for hours daily, practicing his placement booting. Izzy's showing against the Army when he tried for the points after touchdowns was .000, or the same as a blind man's batting average would be against Lefty Grove.

Weinstock is a pretty good place-kicker, but he couldn't get 'em down the old alley against the Cadets. Two of them were high and far enough, but they were a trifle wide. Those three extra points, making the score 21-13, would have looked pretty good on the scoreboard and add years and years to the lives of the Pitt rooters during the final three minutes of the ball game.

Speaking of extra-point getting, Paul Pardonner, Purdue's quarterback, continues to set a real pace for other booters to imitate. Pardonner has tried and made good on four attempts this season. Last year he sent 11 out of 12 between the uprights for points, giving him the very remarkable record of 15 out of 16. Pardonner uses a drop-kick instead of a placement.

Coach Jim Marks has had to break in a new quarterback for his Kiski eleven this week and will try him out against the Wash-Jeff freshmen Saturday. In the Navy game last week, young Jim, the starting quarterback, suffered a broken leg and later on in the fray, Steele was injured and will not be able to play against the Prexy yearlings. Baldorff is to run the eleven Saturday.

Geneva is on edge for its tussle with Boston University Saturday. The Covenanters are hoping for two things—a victory and a crowd. Their chances of getting the first are greater than those of the second. The Pitt-Ohio State game will take a lot of cash customers out of the Beaver Valley.

There will be a flock of ball games throughout the nation Saturday that will be less interesting than the one booked for Waynesburg between the unbeaten Yellow Jackets and Grove City. The Jackets, who've taken Penn State, Muskingum, Slippery Rock and Bethany to date, figure to whip the Crimson, but by no great score.

West Virginia, with its win over Wesleyan, the first victory in four starts, still being fondly admired, is en route today to Detroit, where the Mountaineers must tackle another tough one in the Detroit University gridiron forces tomorrow night. If the Mountaineers can win this one, the clouds which have been hoverhe about Morgantown for so long, may lift.

By JULIUS LEVIN

John G. Hulton, superintendent of Latrobe schools and chairman of the football committee of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League, today clarified the systems under which the football championships will be distributed in the class AA, class A and class B races this season.

As a result of the formation of the AA High School Conference, several changes have been made in the systems under which the titles in other classes will be awarded.

CLASS GAMES COUNT

In past years it was necessary for a class A school to play seven class A opponents to qualify for championship rating. This has been changed to six. Class B schools were required to play five games with class B opponents, but this year they must show victories over six.

Few schools understand the point system which govern the class A and class B races. While in past years defeats by teams of higher or lower classification resulted in elimination from the championship races, only games with class opponents will count, according to Chairman Hulton.

For example, if a class A team loses to a class B team its chances for the class A title will not be impaired. A class B team defeating a class A or class AA team receives no credit for the triumph.

BASED ON PERCENTAGE

The championship of the AA Conference will be determined on a percentage based on victories and defeats. The class A and class B champions will be decided under the point system.

The point system allows a class A team 100 points for every victory over a class A team and 10 points for every victory scored by its defeated rival over a class A team. Fifty points is given a class A contender for holding a class A team to a tie and five points for every victory its tied opponent scores over a class A eleven. The same system applies to the class B race. Thus if Swissvale defeats Duquesne, Ed Paulie's eleven receives 100 points for the victory and 10 additional points for every victory scored by Duquesne against a class A opponent. Swissvale also receives five points for every class A team tied by Duquesne.

To ascertain the number of points owned by a class A or B contender, the total for the season is divided by the number of games played with class opponents.

QUARTERBACKS RATED HIGH BY CASEY

Member, All-America Board of Football. (Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)

As every football student knows—and as every casual fan should be advised—the position of quarterback is the most important on the team. He is literally and actually the "spark-plug." Once the game begins he is the personal representative of the so-called "board of strategy." The tactics of the team are left entirely to his maneuvering.

The slightest indiscretion on the part of a quarterback may well undo the brilliant performance of his best ball carrier. But all quarterbacks do not function in the same manner, varying according to the style and "gearing" of the machine in which they are such important cogs.

To those who are interested in more than the mere pageantry and excitement of a football game I suggest close observation of the quarterback's work. After several games the observer should be able to anticipate the quarterback's subsequent moves very much as in a game of chess or checkers. Although, of course, an alert enemy may upset well laid offensive plans with little warning.

You will observe that some teams, on taking possession of the ball early in a game, resort to kicking immediately. The quarterback on this team has been taught to let the enemy have the ball and pound himself to pieces hoping that the ball will change hands at the expected moment. This type of quarterback must be supported by a strong defensive team, confident and capable of keeping the opposition safely in check.

ENERGY IS CONSERVED

After a period of kicking you eventually will find the kicking team in possession of the ball around midfield—and then they open up. Spinners, passes and runs unfold in orderly fashion, and because they have played a waiting game and conserved their energy this team usually is able to start a big drive and score against somewhat weakened opposition.

Another type of quarterback has been drilled in the idea of taking possession of the ball as quickly as possible and holding on. This, of course, requires a highly drilled offensive machine. The coach and quarterback on this team believe that the best way to keep the enemy from scoring is to deny him possession of the ball. And by direct sequel they further believe that if given possession of the ball long enough, the law of averages will produce a touchdown.

Then there is the team that relies on kicking as its major weapon. The quarterback running this outfit has been drilled almost exclusively in a defensive type of play. In the days of the late Percy Haughton, Harvard stressed the "kicking game"—content to lay back and wait for the big break. This type of team must be fortified with outstanding kickers; players with highly "educated" toes who specialize in drop and place kicking and who at all times are a scoring threat.

GAMBLING OFTEN COSTLY

Finally we come to a team that emphasizes the passing game. The Southern Methodists are perhaps the most spectacular passing outfit of the present day. When Brick Muller was at California his passing made the Golden Bears the "wonder team" of the Pacific Coast. Oberlander passed Dartmouth to the heights of football fame, while Friedman and Oosterbaan, with Newman now following in their footsteps, have made Michigan the scourage of the football airways. Examples of this kind are numerous, but none have had such a lasting influence on the game as a whole as did the pioneer pair—Dorais to Rockne, playing for Notre Dame.

Teams relying entirely on a passing attack are inclined to run up large scores. This quarterback is taught always to "take a chance," which is delightful to the spectators, but sometimes costly to his team. A "gambling" football team will make many errors and a well trained opponent will capitalize on each blunder.

Obviously, the ideal system is to combine kicking, running and conduct and maneuvers of the quarterback at your next football game and you will understand why he fills the most important position on the team.

STAGG LIKELY TO REMAIN AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—A hundred-to-one shot that Amos Alonzo Stagg coaches the 1933 football eleven at the University of Chicago.

That was the prediction yesterday of James Weber Linn, professor of English at the university, close friend of Stagg for years. Prof. Linn made his prediction in a published article, dealing with the enforced retirement of the 70-year-old coach.

Prof. Linn stated that Thomas Nelson Metcalf, named as Stagg's successor as director of athletics, would have full authority to select a coach and that Metcalf knows that Stagg would like to continue at Chicago, and probably will appoint him.

The only obstacle to the appointment will be the probability that Mr. Stagg will have an offer from some other institution so attractive financially that he will be bound to accept it.

Police Aid Search For Paul Oger

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Relatives of Paul Oger, 25, welterweight fighter, have asked police to search for him.

They said Oger left home to attend church Sunday morning and has not been seen since.

Charley Belanger, the Canadian heavyweight boxer, is due in town today for his battle with George Panka, of Homestead, in the Arena tomorrow night. He will be accompanied by Billy McCarney. Joe Jacobs, McCarney's partner in handling Max Schmeling, Belanger and other boxers, was unable to make the trip.

McCarney will be remembered as the manager of Luther McCarthy, a great looking prospect in the White Hope era, who died in the ring after being knocked out by Arthur Pelky in Calgary, Canada, some 20 years ago. Billy thought he had a sure thing as the successor to Jack Johnson, then heavyweight champion, and it was a tough blow when McCarthy, a former cow puncher, who was very popular, met his sudden death.

Matchmaker Lew Raymond, of the Arena, reports a lot of genuine interest in this tussle of heavyweights and looks for the best gate since the Arena opened four weeks ago.

Between Rounds

Joe Kaminski wants to box in Pittsburgh. Who is Joe Kaminski? Well, if you don't know, Joe Kaminski is a tough-punching Polish middleweight from the hard coal region of Pennsylvania, and is boxing under the management of Lew Brown in New York. He has scored 15 knockouts in 31 battles, and is vouched for by Phil Goldstein, former local lightweight boxer.

Here's some more life for the lightweight class hereabouts. Johnny Dunn, of New Kensington, erstwhile featherweight, has packed on a few pounds and is up around 132 pounds now and ready to battle any of the 135-pounders. He is especially keen for bouts with Battling Gizzy and Charley Baxter or Phil Zwick, whom he already has bested twice. Promoters may reach Dunn by mailing New Kensington 1080.

Battling Gizzy is putting in his best training licks for his battle with Tony Herrera at the Garden next Monday night. He wants to win this bout on general principles to begin with, but mainly because a lot of his friends think he has made a bad match. They've been wrong before, and he believes they will be wrong again this time. At any rate, he is getting himself ready for the test in proper fashion and will have no alibis if he is beaten.

SOLDIER FOUR WINS

Chicago Bears Win Over Brooklyn Team

CLEVELAND, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Two intercepted passes allowed Red Grange's Chicago Bears to defeat Benny Friedman's Brooklyn Dodgers in a charity exhibition football game last night, 13 to 0. The National League standings were not affected.

School Notes

Oliver High defends its hold on first place in Section II of the City League today when Ray Peters sends his eleven against South Hills, defending champion, at Oliver High field this afternoon. The game originally was scheduled for tomorrow at Langley Field, but was moved up to avoid sending the students long distances for home games.

Bill Lentz, star punter and halfback of the South Hills eleven, who was injured in the intersectional game with South High, has discarded his crutches and there is hope he will be available for service in the important battle with Carrick. South Hills has not been the same team without Lentz.

The Bradock-East Pittsburgh game has been called off and as a result Braddock will invade Derry Township Saturday afternoon.

Wally Pickett's Edgewood High eleven, undefeated in the race for the Class B championship, will have a chance to pick up 105 points by defeating Aspinwall at home tomorrow. Aspinwall's best showing to date has been a scoreless deadlock with Millvale.

Swissvale and Duquesne risk their hopes for the Class A championship in their battle at Swissvale Saturday. Coaches Paulie, of Swissvale, and Parker, of Duquesne, are driving their squads for the important conflict.

Freedom High School is going to bear watching in the Class B race. Bill Storer's Beaver Valley eleven has been beaten only once, Rochester, a Class A team, turning the trick, 18-0. Leetsdale, Zelienople, Sewickley and Karns City, all Class B foes, have been beaten by Freedom.

Taylor Allderdice will be seeking revenge for a 13-0 defeat suffered at the hands of Peabody last season when the two teams meet in a Section 1 City League contest at Allderdice tomorrow. Westinghouse meets Fifth Avenue at Schenley Field in the other Section 1 engagement.

Best Auto Route To South Bend

To assist the many automobile parties that will travel to South Bend to see the Carnegie Tech-Notre Dame football game on Saturday, the Pittsburgh Automobile Club has selected the best roads to use.

The route pointed out is as follows: U. S. 30 to East Liverpool, O. Ohio 39 to Carollton, right on Ohio 43 to Canton, U. S. 30 to Mansfield, U. S. 30 north to Delphos, U. S. 30 to Ft. Wayne, Ind., and Indiana 2 to South Bend.

Tech Cross Country Team Faces N. D.

Carnegie Tech's varsity cross-country team will open its season Saturday by meeting Notre Dame on the South Bend course in a preliminary to the football game there. Coach Guy Halferty will take seven runners to South Bend on the special football train that is to leave tonight.

The cross-country run will start at 11 a. m. Saturday.

SYCAMORES VICTORS

The Etna Sycamores defeated the East Liberty Paulsons, 13 to 0, under the lights at Etna last night. Panion, Sycamore halfback, scored in the first period, and Gannon, sub back, tallied in the final. The lineup:

Etna—13.		Paulson—0.
Jenson	L. E.	Lambert
Barsh	L. T.	Freeman
Marclay	L. G.	Reynolds
Metzger	C.	Keagan
Skirtich	R. G.	Matio
Harding	R. T.	Templeton
J. Vinski	R. E.	Mazovic
Thomas	Q.	Azzara
Newman	L. H.	Mines
Panion	R. H.	Miller
Miller	F.	Steele

Score by quarters:

Etna	7	0	0	6	—13

Substitution — Cannon for Newman. Touchdowns—Panion, Cannon. Goal from touchdown—Panion (dropkick). Referee—Gannon. Umpire—Wallace. Head linesman—Monahan. Time of quarters—12 minutes.

Arnold Prep Points For Tough Battles

Coach Paul M. Heverley, of Arnold School, will begin preparations tomorrow for the final half of the football schedule. Two important contests, one with Millvale, on October 28, and the other with Western Reserve Academy, Hudson, O., Arnold's traditional rival, November 12, are to be played.

A. A. May Add To 1933 Schedule

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—The American Association may extend its 1933 baseball campaign by one week to keep step with the majors. The major league season next year will run from April 12 or 13 to October 1.

It was at the request of the National League that the 1933 season was extended principally to include an extra Sunday. Sunday games have been profitable ones for the American Association, too, so the Class AA loop is expected to follow suit.

Club owners of the American Association will hold a special meeting here Saturday to discuss 1933 plans.

W. VA. WESLEYAN FORMIDABLE TEST FOR NIGHT RIDERS

DUKES TO SEEK REVENGE FOR '31 DEFEAT

Duquesne University's Night Riders, who will be what their name implies but once more this season, await the zero hour before their clash with West Virginia Wesleyan's formidable Bobcat eleven today in high spirits. The Dukes, in fine physical shape, are looking forward to securing revenge for last year's licking at the claws of the Bobcats by taking them over at Forbes Field tomorrow night.

The contest will wind up the nocturnal campaigning of the Dukes, who will complete their season with daylight encounters.

BOBCATS POINTED

The Bobcats, who have been pointed for this game, are due in town this evening and will establish headquarters at the Fort Pitt Hotel. Despite setbacks at West Virginia and Wash-Jeff, Coach Cebe Ross' eleven is accounted a powerful one and will furnish the locals with as stiff a test as they desire.

A year ago, led by the incomparable Cliff Battles, the Bobcats whipped the Night Riders. The year previous, the Dukes won, so that tomorrow's contest takes on the aspect of the "rubber" engegement.

EDMUNDSON STAR

The Bobcats will present a crackerjack center in Edmundson, as fine a defensive star as there is in the district. He'll give Duquesne's ace, Ben Ciccone, a busy evening.

With Battles gone, the Wesleyan attack is not as formidable as in the past, but Beveridge and Art Bachtel are dangerous performers. Beveridge hits hard and backs up the line very well.

RAIN, INJURIES HURT BUCKS

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 20.—AP.)—Rain and injuries combined yesterday to worry Coach Sam Willaman in his preparations for the game at Pittsburgh Saturday.

Carl Cramer continued to nurse a sore knee, Junius Ferrall, regular end, was on the sidelines with a bad leg and several others were nursing bruises. Rain and mud then confined the squad to a short passing session and perfection of several new plays.

WCAE to Broadcast Skibo-Irish Game

Radio station WCAE, the voice of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, will broadcast a telegraphic description of the Carnegie Tech-Notre Dame game at South Bend, Ind., Saturday, starting at 3 o'clock.

Jess Carver, Sun-Telegraph staff correspondent, who is to be at the scene of the battle, will provide the information for the broadcast. Listeners will receive a play-by-play account of the contest, as well as attendant highlights and featues.

The broadcast will be in furtherance of WCAE's policy of providing the utmost in football entertainment and bringing outstanding games to the homes of fans who are unable to quit their homes for the games. The policy was inaugurated last Saturday when the Pitt-Army game in West Point was consigned to Pittsburgh ether.

Mrs. Cheney Wins Mexican Golf Title

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Oct. 20—(INS.)—Mrs. Leona Cheney, California champion, today possessed a new golf title—that of women's champion of Mexico.

She won the honor by playing a final 36 holes one under par for a 72-hole total of 320. Mrs. Roy Green finished second with 332, 12 strokes behind. Next came Mrs. Gregg Lufur, one of the early leaders, with 333. Miss Lucille de Long, of San Diego, was fourth, two strokes behind Mrs. Lifur.

Giroux and Firpo Suspended in State

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission today announced the indefinite suspension of Art Giroux, boxer, of Montreal, Can., for "conduct detrimental to the sport."

Henry Firpo, boxer, Louisville, Ky., was declared "ineligible indefinitely for failure to honor contract with the Johnstown (Pa.) A. C."

FIELDS IN TRAINING

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Jackie Fields, world welterweight champion, is back in training. Apparently recovered from impairment of vision, Fields has started training for a series of tuneup bouts before he defends his title Against Young Corbett, of San Francisco, next February. He will leave for Los Angeles tomorrow to complete training for his first match in Kansas City next month. Fields weighs 156 pounds, nine over the championship limit.

DUKES TO BE HONORED

The Emerson Club, of Sacred Heart Church, will entertain the Duquesne University football squad at a Halloween masquerade in the Guild Hall, 5920 Center avenue, on Friday evening. Meredith King is chairman.

MRS. VARE VICTOR

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20.—(INS.)—Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare today held the Dorothy Campbell Hurd golf cup. She won the event with a score of 156 for 36 holes of medal play. Miss Edith Quier was runner-up with a 160 score.

Second Homer Roe Stars on Grid

HOMER ROE, JR., OLIVER HIGH SCHOOL CAPTAIN . . . . . HIS DAD PLAYED AT PITT

Leading the Oliver High School football team in its City League battle against South Hills on the home field this afternoon is Homer Roe, Jr., star center. Dr. Homer Roe, his father, was a crack end of the WUP and Pitt teams of 1907, '08 and '09, and captain in his last year, when Pitt was the only team to defeat the Carlisle Indians. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

LOCAL YOUTH JACKET STAR

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Oct. 20.—O. O. McIntyre's favorite wheeze about the country boy who made good in the city has been reversed by Mark Booth, a city boy from Dormont High School, who has made good in the country by earning himself a place on Waynesburg College's undefeated football team this fall.

Mark Booth

Coming here directly from Dormont High School, where he played football and was active in other sports, Booth was able to make the squad in his freshman year. Much benefitted by his year's experience, Booth came back to Greene County again this fall and won his spurs as a dependable performer in Waynesburg's "big game" with Penn State.

Assigned to start at guard when Weddie Mancuso became ill, Booth performed in faultless fashion when pitted against the only major opponent on the Waynesburg schedule and turned in a capable performance, even though outweighed many pounds by his opponent. The Dormont youth saw plenty of action in the Waynesburg-Bethany game last Saturday, and likely will participate in the annual Homecoming Day game at Waynesburg Saturday between Waynesburg and Grove City.

Booth is the second member of his family to hold down a guard position on a college football eleven. His brother, Kent Booth, played the same position for Carnegie Tech in 1928.

This Year It's The Germans of Notre Dame

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—It's the Germans of Notre Dame this year, Coach Hunk Anderson said:

"We've got some good Irish-men on the team now, but take a glance at those Germans. We've got more of them this year than ever before. And they're good too."

Collingwood Leads In Cue Tourney

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—William Collingwood, of Asheville, N. C., went into the lead in the pocket billiards championship tournament for the eastern division of the southern section last night when he defeated Coy Julian, of Springfield, Ill., 100 to 84, in 30 innings. Collingwood's high run was 24 and Julian's 29.

Collingwood has four victories and one defeat for the tournament.

James Thompson, of Tampa, Fla., won his first victory in the tournament by defeating L. A. Hacker, of St. Louis, 100 to 33. Thompson had a high run of 33 and Hacker one of 9.

Y NET DINNER ON TONIGHT

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

East Liberty Y. M. C. A. racqueters will harken back to the net campaign this evening at dinner to wind up loose ends of the East End organization's most successful court season. Fifty performers are expected to attend the fiesta, in the course of which the titular trophy will be formally presented Bill Erdle, premier for 1932.

The speakers' list for the affair includes names well known in the Steel City tennis realm. J. Phillips Davis, Pittsburgh's Tennis Association president and donor of the Davis Keg, will discuss the highly successful P. T. A. promotion campaign of the past summer.

Dr. David L. O'Loughlin, leader of the champion P. A. A. team and former National Boys' and West Penn champion, is slated to explain stroke execution and tactics, while his Winged Head mate, Paul Sullivan, secretary of the P. T. A., is booked to narrate experiences as a court scribe.

Thomas A. Robinson, chairman of the Fox Chapel Golf Club tennis committee, will serve as toastmaster. The dinner has been arranged by Ralph Blakeley, East Liberty "Y" activities secretary, and by Edward Milliren, chairman of tennis at the East End branch. Six-thirty p. m. is the starting time.

Following the dinner Warren Krueger, tennis professional of the Pittsburgh Golf Club, will stage a demonstration clinic in the gymnasium.

Some five or six years ago Pelandok figured in the events of a day that gave me a better picture of the Malay mind than anything that ever happened to me before—or since. I was walking along the tree-lined road that leads from Port Swettenham, principal shipping point of the Federated Malay States, to the village of Klang, about five miles away. My boys were at a temporary compound I had established on the outskirts of this village, looking after some tigers we had trapped in the neighboring jungles, and I was on my way to join them.

Unable to secure a horse-drawn gharry and not caring to travel by ricksha except when the distance is comparatively short, I decided to make the journey on foot. Having hoofed it between these points on several occasions, I can say with a fair amount of authority that this is one of the finest walks in the world. You make your way over a road that is perfectly shaded on both sides. It is built right on the edge of the jungle.

EATS WITH NATIVES

Halfway to Klang I ran into a sati man (vender of bits of charcoal-roasted meat) around whose portable restaurant a group of eight or nine Malays sat, characteristically, on their haunches. The sati man, Malay equivalent of our hot-dog vender, greeted me with a friendly, "Tabek, tuan." (Good day, master.) The others, equally friendly, greeted me also; and as I was growing hungry I decided that this would be a good place to stop for food. It is not unusual in the more remote parts of the Malay country for a foreigner to join a group of natives in this fashion. There is no caste system as in India.

I squatted down with the others and ordered some food. The sati man got busy in regulation fashion. Taking a number of straws on which small bits of meat had been strung, he started preparing my meal. With one hand he held the meat over the charcoal, with the other he worked a fan by way of keeping the coals red hot. As each string of meat was cooked he handed it to me. I in turn dipped it into the common saucepan containing a fiery gravy and ate with my fingers in native fashion. As I finished each unit I placed the straw beside me so that when I had ended my meal the man could count them and know how much I owed him.

The food was excellent and I kept saying, "Kasi, lagi." (Give me some more.)

As I sat there on my haunches, dunking and eating, there reached my ears from the heavy jungle at our backs a gentle tapping, followed by an answering series of taps, like faint drumbeats—unmistakable signs of one mouse deer signalling to another.

"Pelandok!" cried one of the Malays.

AN EMOTIONAL OUTBURST

Soon we were all animatedly discussing Pelandok—the man at the charcoal burner continuing to feed us what I had by now decided was the best sati I had ever tasted.

One of the Malays, growing quite emotional about the beloved mouse deer, unburdened himself of a ringing denunciation of the harimau, the kuching, the serigala, and the rajawali (the tiger, leopard, wolf and eagle, in other words) and all other species known to prey upon the mouse deer. I thought he would burst into tears as he went on to say what an outrage it was that this wisest and most heavenly of animals had no protection from these vicious creatures. The idea of their molesting Che Salam di Rimba! (Sir Peace of the Jungle, another of Pelandok's fancy titles.) He that brings peace to the jungle—which is one of the mouse deer's time-honored roles in Malay legendry—has a right to expect peace himself.

All the Malays nodded their approbation and I—seeing no harm in being a jungle yes-man—nodded too, only taking time out to yell once more, "Kasi, lagi"—for that sati was getting better and better and I meant what I said when I yelled for more. My fellow-diners joined me in this cry and soon we were all eating again.

At last, having downed all the food I could hold, I handed my straws—there were 10 of them—to the journeying restaurateur and asked him, "Berapa?" (How much?)

"Sapulph sen," he replied. (Ten cents—Malay money.)

I paid him and prepared to leave. As I rose to my feet and stretched, I asked him a question about his sati. The meat had a finer flavor than any I had ever eaten. Curiosity impelled me to inquire, "Apa daging sati ini?" (Of what kind of meat is this made?)

"Daging Pelandok, tuan," came the casual—and astonishing—reply, which, translated, means, "It is Pelandok meat, master."

The other natives were surprised to hear that I did not know all along that this was mouse-deer meat I was eating. They went on to tell me how I could always be sure I was eating genuine Pelandok.

This story, better than anything else I could tell you, illustrates the attitude of the Malays toward the mouse deer, my favorite four-legged midget. They see nothing contradictory in their conduct.

I went on my way, and as I did I again heard a mouse deer tapping signals to its mate. And I vowed that I would make one more effort to get a Pelandok into this country. The Bureau of Animal Industry sometimes issues special permits allowing ruminants to enter, as it did in the case of Little Tough Guy and my other pygmies from Celebes. The government, of course, has to be careful; but I have never seen a mouse deer that showed any signs of being a carrier of rinderpest or foot-and-mouth disease, and before I leave Asia on my next collection trip I plan to try that argument on someone in Washington.

BURNS ELEVEN TO DROP OUT OF LEAGUE

The Burns Club, of New Kensington, was reported out of the Western Independent Football Conference today, following its 7-6 defeat by the Rooneys last night. It was said the club would disband, although no official announcement has come from the management.

Mose Kelsh's boot gave the North Siders the extra point that decided the skirmish. Bud Devinney crossed the goal line on a nine-yard run. Seybrun scored for the home team.

The East Liberty Papales and McKeesport play at Greenlee Field tonight. On Sunday, the Rooney invade Bellaire, O., and West View plays at McKeesport. Last night's lineup:

Rooneys—7.		Burns—6.
Lantz	L. E.	Mercurio
Quatte	L. T.	Harrington
Gallagher	L. G.	Temeria
Drechar	C.	Blackson
Demas	R. G.	Willoughby
Karcis	R. T.	Bell
Guarino	R. E.	Barbero
Vaughn	Q.	Berkman
Rooney	L. H.	Seaburn
Clark	R. H.	Davis
Kelsch	F.	Roche

Score by quarters:

Rooneys	0	0	7	0—7
Burns	0	0	0	6—6

Substitution—Devinney for Vaughn. Touchdowns—Devinney, Davis. Goal from touchdown—Kelsch (placement). Referee—Robb. Umpire—Bell. Head linesman—Weiss.

Report Bookies Hit By Radio Denied

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Officials of the National Jockey Club at Sportsman's Park today scoffed at reports that bookmakers were being defrauded on Chicago races by short-wave radio.

According to reports, a short-wave radio service had been installed to give bettors in the East the results of races at Sportsman's Park before telegraph. Bookmakers in Akron and Cleveland were said to have been "taken" for thousands of dollars.

A gambling coupe was attempted at Sportsman's yesterday. Several thousand dollars were dumped in suddenly on Nusakan and riders changed. But the horse finished last in a miserable race.

Coach Lieb Burned In Fighting Fire

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 20.—(INS.)—Coach Tom Lieb, famous product of Notre Dame, whose Loyola University team bowed stubbornly to the University of Southern California, 6 to 0, last Saturday, was nursing burns on his hands today as the result of leading his football squad in fighting a blaze that broke out in a lumber pile near the practice field.

The entire team pitched in to help until the fire department arrived. Loss was estimated at $2,000.

RAIN, INJURIES RETARD OHIO STATE TEAM

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Dartmouth's regulars had considerable trouble with the Harvard aerial attack yesterday and the freshmen made several long gains.

Eastern Briefs

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Rain drove Harvard indoors yesterday, but Coach Eddie Casey found a pair of portable goal posts and drilled his kickers at making points after touchdowns. The forward pass defense also came in for much attention.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Penn State devoted its drill yesterday entirely to defensive work against Syracuse plays. The Lions have had no scrimmage this week.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Charley Ceppi, former reserve guard, was shifted to left tackle yesterday in an effort to fill the hole left by Art Lane's injury. The Tigers looked good against Navy running plays in a defensive scrimmage but were weak against passes.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Syracuse held another long scrimmage yesterday and Coach Vic Hanson against put the emphasis on speed and tackling. He said the reconstructed team appeared much better than the one which lost to Ohio Wesleyan and Southern Methodist.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Colgate again worked on its lateral passing attack yesterday despite New York University's reported strong defense against it. Coach Andy Kerr said Coleau, Ask, Fritts and Rowe undoubtedly would be the starting backfield.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Yale drilled on new plays to be used against Army in a short supervised scrimmage yesterday. Bob O'Connell, injured since early in the season, reported for action and was placed at left end.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Ernie Vavra, veteran New York University tackle, who has been on the injured list for two weeks, returned to practice yesterday as the Violets held a long drill in preparation for meeting Colgate. He took part only in the signal practice, but is expected to start against the Maroons.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Columbia scrimmaged against Manhattan in the rain yesterday for half of its two-hour drill. The second team got a lot of work and it is possible that the reserves may start against Williams to prevent possible injuries to the regulars before meeting Cornell.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Still short handed through injuries, Army went through a long offensive session yesterday in a driving rain. The drill was devoted entirely to power plays and was marred by frequent fumbling.

GRINS From the GRID

—By O. W. (Red) Severence—

Noted Southern Football Official. Written for Associated Press.

NO. 9.

The late Knute Rockne, immortal coach of Notre Dame, had an uncanny ability of instilling confidence into his men by allowing them to work their way out of a tight spot without his advice.

But if it seemed that nothing short of advice from the coach's bench could save a game, Rockne could be depended upon to send in a substitute with the desired information.

Crowley says:

"We couldn't stop Nevers that day. He would crock through one side for five yards and then hit the other side for six more. We would pick ourselves off the ground and look over at the sidelines, hoping Rock would send in somebody to tell us what was wrong with our defense.

"Finally Nevers brought the ball down to the three-yard line. Then our prayers were answered. Out from the sidelines dashed a big sophomore named McMullen, so excited at playing before 75,000 people he forgot whose place he was to take and simply told the referee:

"'I'm for Notre Dame.'

"But we knew he was bringing information from Rock that would break up that one-man drive if it were possible to break it up.

"We held Nevers on the first play, called time out and huddled around McMullen to hear the news that would strengthen our defense.

"Stammering and stuttering, he finally gulped forth:

"'B-boys, R-R-Rock said th-the trouble wa-was—'

"'Yes, go on!'

"'He said th-the trouble was that you're no-no-not stopping th-th-that Nevers.'

Crowley adds:

"And the funny part was that good old McMullen threw Nevers for a loss on the next three plays and Stanford lost the ball on downs."

DETROIT LOSES SCHEARER FOR W. VA. GAME

DETROIT, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Misfortune struck a cruel blow at the University of Detroit football team yesterday when Chris Schearer, varsity right halfback, suffered a broken wrist in tackling drill and was pronounced lost to the squad for the remainder of the season.

Schearer fell while attempting to straight-arm a tackler and his arm twisted beneath his body.

Joe Jacobs Breaks With Garden, Sails

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, is on the broad Atlantic today headed for Berlin to confer with Maxie on plans for the future. Before sailing he announced he had broken with Madison Square Garden interests because they want to give Jack Sharkey, the present champion, 42½ per cent and Schmeling only 10 for their return bout next summer.

The fact that their recent meeting in which Sharkey took the title was fought on the same basis, with the terms reversed, has no bearing on the matter, according to Jacobs, who holds that Schmeling is a bigger attraction than Sharkey.

Jacobs said he was considering a match for Schmeling against Max Baer either in California or Chicago.

STOCK MARKET MOVEMENT IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Rails, provided with fresh steam by encouraging carloadings reports, were unable to pull the stock market out of its lethargy today.

The leaders slid off 1 to more than 2 points during the first hour, regained much of the loss during a temporary upturn in the rails, but receded again in the early afternoon, with tobaccos again under considerable pressure.

The persistent heaviness of the tobaccos imposed a drag on the market, while rails were the outstanding firm spot. Statisticians were again estimating a fair increase in the movement of freight for the country at large, to be shown in the weekly statement due on Saturday. Continued gains in carloadings well into the middle of October is contrary to the usual seasonal trend, and has brought considerable encouragement to rail executives. Advance estimates indicated that a few more carriers would show their fixed charges earned for October, although the earnings problem for the carriers at large is still described as acute.

Brokerage quarters were busy with gossip over United States Steel's preferred dividend action, due next week, and were inclined to take a moderately optimistic attitude, on the theory that the steel outlook had been enhanced by the better feeling among railroad executives. The carriers are one of the chief consumers of steel. Corporate earnings statements coming to hand for the first nine months again attracted attention. A number of the food companies showed net for the period only slightly under the like period of last year. Two Canadian gold mines, McIntyre Porcupine and Dome, showed gains over a year ago. Gold mining had been helped by the slump in general commodity prices, enhancing the relative value of gold, but if the bottom of the slump in commodities was seen in June and July, as many now hold, the gold mining industry can look for no further stimulation of that sort.

There were further reports of foreign buying in this market. On the whole, however, the business was said to be of small proportions, with buying somewhat in excess of selling. Some purchases of railroad securities were reported for Swiss account.

Continental Can To Lower Capital

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—The Continental Can Company today announced a plan for adjusting its property values and assets "to meet existing conditions."

At a special meeting on November 22 stockholders will be asked to change the present no par stock to $20 par, thus reducing stated value from $63,249,903 to a total par value of $34,666,900 and creating a capital surplus of $28,583,003. From this the company will appropriate $6,000,000, which will be added to the "depression reserve" to bring plants and machinery down to current net replacement values.

Youngstown Steel Operations Recede

YOUNGSTOWN, Oct. 20.—Steel plant operations in the Youngstown district at midweek had eased to 18 per cent of rated capacity, against an estimated 20 per cent at the week's start, as a result of a drop in sheet and strip requirements.

Iron and steel scrap prices in this district show a narrow decline in all grades apparently, as a result of uncertainty over election results. Heavy melting steel is quoted at $9.75, off 25 cents a ton, and hydraulic compressed sheets, $8.75 to $9.50, off 25 cents.

Indiana Limestone Program Approved

The company has received a contract to supply stone for the new Department of Labor and Interstate Commerce Commission Building at Washington. A total of 1,555 cars of stone will be required.

Indiana Raises Fuel Oil Price

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—The Standard Oil Company of Indiana has raised the tank wagon price of heating and burning oils in metropolitan Chicago ½ cent a gallon on grade 1, 2 and 3, and ¼ cent a gallon on grade 4.

DIVIDEND NEWS

Atlantic Coast Line.

Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company announced that no income after payment of mortgage bond interest and expenses has been earned this year. Therefore, no interest can be paid November 1 on the 4 per cent certificates of indebtedness. Since this interest takes precedence over any dividend on the stock, no dividend will be paid November 10 on the 1,967 shares of preferred now outstanding.

Artloom Corporation

Artloom Corporation declared a dividend of 75 cents on the preferred, being the balance of the dividend for the quarterly period ended March 1, 1932, $1 of which was paid on March 1, 1932. MORE BUSINESS MEN ENTERING PUBLIC LIFE

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—As the operation of government becomes more variegated and more complex, it is a good sign that businessmen are showing more inclination to enter public life.

The end of the strike of the business man against public office came during the war when numerous executives gave up their regular tasks to become dollar a year men at Washington. But even though it is more customary than before for business men to serve on commissions and special bodies, they are still reluctant as a class to go before the electorate for political preferment.

Mr. Rukeyser

LEHMAN GIVES VIEWS

Lieut. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, Democratic candidate for governor in New York, is an example of the business man who has succeeded in politics. I called upon Col. Lehman to ascertain his views on the place of the business man and the banker in public office.

Mr. Lehman remarked:

"Government has its humane side, of course. But it also has its economic aspects. I think that the well balanced business man is likely to be qualified to pass on these economic questions. Take, for example, the treatment of mental cases in state hospitals. It is essentially humane work, yet it is equally desirable from an economic standpoint, especially the occupational training. By fitting such unfortunate persons to return to ordinary life, the state is relieved of the cost of their maintenance and also of the capital cost of erecting additional hospital space.

"Likewise, let's consider the parole system. We have worked out a good parole system in New York State, not a perfect one, of course, from a humane standpoint. We don't want to keep poor devils in jail longer than we have to. And on the economic side, it costs only $90 a year to supervise men on parole, as compared with $400 to $500 maintaining them in prison."

SERVICES VALUABLE

In addition to the growing number of economic decisions which must be made in behalf of the government, Col. Lehman also emphasized the administrative duties of the Governor, which he considered analagous to those of the experienced business executive.

When I suggested that public officials had in the past been too largely made up of the lawyer class, Col. Lehman concurred, pointing out that he was not a lawyer. He indicated that he found it possible to get interpretation of the law from skilled legal advisers and added that the law was largely a matter of common sense anyway.

Col. Lehman was distinctly of the opinion that the improving grade of business executives could make a substantial contribution to governmental service. When asked why relatively so few business men in the United States go out for public office, Col. Lehman indicated that, in the first place, they are inclined to consider politics "dirty business." They chafe under the red tape and delay which seem to some extant at least necessary in order to prevent corruption and graft; and they dislike the civil service restrictions which limit their right to hire and fire. Moreover, Col. Lehman added:

"Most business man think they are bound to be criticized in public life. As for myself, I expect to be criticized. Some criticism, especially if it is constructive, is helpful."

Manhattan Company Groups Realigned

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—A plan for realignment of the units of the Manhattan Company group of banking and financial organizations was announced yesterday.

The Manhattan board of directors, it was stated, had agreed to recommend to the various stockholders a consolidation of the businesses of tht Bank of Manhattan Trust Company and the International Acceptance Bank, Inc., and the separate operation and management of the New York Title and Mortgage Company and the Bank of Manhattan Trust Company.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Indications of firmness in some of the rail loans gave a somewhat more cheerful tone to the bond market today, but prices as a whole showed considerable irregularity. United States government section also rallied moderately after easing yesterday. With the exception of the Germans, which were slightly off, foreign bonds were fairly firm.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows (000 omitted in sales column; United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

Europeans Not Frightened By Our Politics

—By B. C. FORBES—

THE FINANCIAL WORLD was pretty much resigned to President Hoover's defeat some weeks ago. It now hints that coming developments will tend to give the present administration a fighting chance by the time November 8 arrives.

Mr. Forbes

You may have noticed that the drastic downswing in securities which followed the Maine election has latterly been checked. This is due partly to a change in political sentiment among financial high-ups, partly to encouraging business developments.

A more philosophic attitude towards the influence of politics is spreading. There is now more inclination to reason that a Democratic victory would not necessarily mean the blighting of the business recovery which has been making modest progess.

High finance isn't now so sure of the widsom of such declaration to employes as have been published this week by Henry Ford, Gen. Atterbury of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and lesser industrial leaders. It is now accounted safer and saner to promulgate the idea that, regardless of the election outcome, conditions have been so strengthened that betterment promises to continue and spread.

May it not be significant that Europeans who waded in and purchased American securities at the year's lowest quotations, have again been active on the buying side—after having turned some of their generous, rapidly-accumulated profits into cash during the extraordinary rise?

Presumably, European investors have reached the conclusion that America has overcome its worst troubles and is now destined to move ahead no matter which political party wields power.

Wall Street hears that Gov. Roosevelt means to take early occasion to emphasize that he is neither a dangerous inflationist nor any other kind of fearsome radical.

So, we shall see what we shall see.

William B. Joyce, head of the National Surety Company, tells me that he has sent a letter to 14,000 of the company's representatives urging them to buy. He says:

"It seems absurd to me that the only power we have in this country to create jobs is not adequately used, namely, the wages that are now being paid. These wages are like water power which is dammed up. Remove the dam and see the trade recovery!"

He himself has started buying "extras." His communication to the 14,000 says, in part:

"People seem to be buying as little as possible. It must be clear that if everybody stopped buying there would be practically no work for anybody. On the other hand, if everybody started buying adequately, jobs would be created for many thousands of unemployed and possibly for all.

"There are approximately 49,000,000 people still profitably employed. By each spending an extra dollar each week for a year—just for promotion of prosperity—there would be 2,548,000,000 additional dollars diverted into trade channels.

"We therefore urge you all to start buying all of the things that you would normally buy for your personal needs. And an 'extra' sum.

"To those associated with the company outside of New York, we recommend that they take the lead in organizing, in their respective communities, a committee of important business men to arouse the people into promptly buying for their needs (and luxuries, too, where they can) and make the campaign as important and far-reaching as possible. I have personally already started and intend to continue."

A NUMBER of Britain's very foremost economists have issued a statement that, whereas they had always urged the exercise of the strictest economy, they have now become convinced that existing conditions call for spending.

Obviously, we cannot look for a normal volume of business so long as there is not a normal volume of buying. Widespread niggardliness spells continued widespread unemployment.

IT USED to be, "Taxation is vexation." Now it is, "Taxation is ruination." It is iniquitous that you and I should have to hand over one dollar out of every four to tax collectors.

VALENTINE

Captivating Story of a Shy Girl Rushed Into Love

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER LII.

"Val's not hysterical! The Macfarlanes don't have hysterics. She's just a little high strung—gets that from her mother's side. She'll be all right.

"Val! You stop that! I didn't bring you up to be sorry for yourself. Now, Val, you stop! Of course, Joe Carey wants you. He always did from the time he was knee high to a grasshopper. That's one thing I will say about Joe, he knew what he wanted . . . oh, dear, what's got into that girl?

"Val, you stop that! I won't have it! Val, please look at me, look at Aunt Julia? Val, I didn't mean what I said about—about a divorced woman. Val, if there's really any reason why you don't want to go back . . . Mr. Bolton, do you mind bringing a pitcher of water? I believe I'll sprinkle it on her, or throw some on her face. That's what she needs, to bring her out of this."

"I've already telephoned for the ambulance, Miss Macfarlane. Believe me, the girl is ill. A hospital is the place for hysterics."

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Aunt Julia, stiff from kneeling over the prostrate girl, sat back on her haunches, wiped her perspiring face.

"Maybe you're right. I don't know what to do. When I first got her she used to have crying spells, but not like this. I never gave into her. I wish I knew what to do—"

"It's all right. They'll have her at the hospital in five minutes."

"No! No! No!" Val sobbed. She wanted to stop crying, but she couldn't. She saw the two young men with white coats, and the stretcher. She knew they were coming for her, and she WOULDN'T go, not if she died for it! "No! No!"

The young men rolled her into the stretcher as if she were already dead. They slid the stretcher into an ambulance, and sped away.

It was funny, but only Joe could comfort her. Joe whom she had sworn never to see again.

They had given her something to quiet her. She remembered that. Remembered drifting into sleep, while the tears still rolled down her cheeks, and their salty brine was bitter on her lips.

And when she woke Joe was there, holding her hand. She pretended to be still asleep, long after she was awake. It was so comforting to have him there, to be ill, not to have to explain.

BACK TO MINNESOTA

But you never did have to explain to Joe. Joe just took things as they happened.

Everyone seemed to take it for granted that she was going back to Minnesota, and it was so much easier to let them think that she had always intended to go.

She did enjoy the trip, with a drawing room all her own, and Aunt Julia and Joe and Uncle Joel all dancing attendance on her. It was only May, so the country was still green and lovely, and the hot weather that they talked so much about certainly hadn't arrived.

It seemed so queer to be back in Minnesota with Aunt Julia, and living in Joe's uncle's house.

And what Aunt Julia did to that house? Bewildered, thoroughly indignant maids scuttled around with buckets brimming with soapy water. Dingy cut-glass was washed, polished until it shone. A stupid, thick-lipped lad, with a thatch of straw-colored hair, sat on a stool in the kitchen and rubbed grayish silver until it turned light and bright. Mrs. Swansen, the old housekeeper, quit.

And what a different Minnesota she had come back to. It was March when she left. Now it was June. June in a lush, green world. At Uncle Joel's place the driveway was arched over with the broad light green leaves of elms. Magnificent bushes of lilacs were covered with fragrant purple flowers. Robins were everywhere. Squirrels scampered across the lawn.

PEARL ENGAGED

"Of course, I'll always be loyal to California. I was a Native Daughter, and I'll never forget that. But I just love it here!" Aunt Julia said.

"Val, do you think you'd ever be happy to go back to Cornish street? I wouldn't. Pshaw! It's 4 o'clock, I've got to run in and fix Mr. Bolton's tea, he never enjoys it unless I fix it.

"Georgie! Georgie, you put down that book and go wash your hands and face good! If you clean your nails, too, you can have an extra piece of cake! Val, did you ever see anything like the way that kid has changed since I took him in hand? And Elwyn, too, since he's engaged to Pearl. I declare I'm gettin' to like 'em both, in spite of rememberin' what brats they used to be."

That was another miracle, Pearl and Elwyn. Engaged. Now that she was back, and had had time to see Pearl in this new light, Val could see that she was really a nice sort. Domineering, of course, but that was just the thing Elwyn needed, he was so soft. Between Mrs. Peacock and Pearl, they'd certainly changed that boy. Though how anyone could marry Elwyn, after having been in love with Joe.

Well, that was Pearl's problem. She seemed satisfied, and if she was satisfied, Val wasn't going to worry.

As it had turned out, there wasn't much to worry about. Nobody was surprised that she had returned. She had faced them—the Willowes, the Clauses, the Murphys, all of them, with studied nonchalance that she had tried not to make too defiant. And discovered that it wasn't necessary. Joe had never given her away. Nobody knew.

UNCLE IS DIFFERENT

Even entertaining was easy now. She could make up her mind at noon, telephone two or three couples, and have a perfect dinner party at seven. All she had to do was to arrange the flowers, and help Aunt Julia decide whether to have strawberry mousse or maple ice cream for dessert.

Joe said that Uncle Joel wasn't the same man since Aunt Julia came. He had always been so crotchety, and he never permitted people to come except for his rare formal dinners at which he "paid off" as many obligations as possible at a time.

Now he encouraged Val to invite all Joe's friends, joked with Joe and young Georgie, flattered Aunt Julia, and made a tremendous fuss over Val.

Val was so happy in the lovely old house, lazily reading and dreaming in a hammock under the trees, that she hated to see the big car drive up to the side door and know that Aunt Julia was going to insist upon her making the daily trip to town.

Aunt Julia, at 50, was taking her maiden interest in clothes.

"Now let me see . . . I have a fitting at Bjorkman's at 3, and I want to go back to Young Quinland's and buy that hat I looked at yesterday. And there's a place on Hennepin . . . or was it Marquette—no, it was Nicollett, where I saw a blouse in a window. Well, I think I can find it. It will go well with my blue—"

"Aunt Julia, you're getting awfully gay!"

"Nonsense! I have to look decent, don't I? I don't want the Honorable Joel Joshua Bolton to be ashamed of his housekeeper, a man in a big, prominent position like that!"

Well, it was fun! Val enjoyed it. She even liked the people better than she used to. Rosamund Hendricks and Sally Claus were getting her into their bridge club, and now that she had got interested in playing golf with Pearl, Uncle Joel had promised both Joe and Elwyn memberships in his club, so that the girls could play there.

She even enjoyed the "cooking school" that Aunt Julia conducted every morning. Cooking isn't bad when there's nothing at stake and you don't have to worry about whether you can eat it or not.

"There! Didn't I tell you? Anybody can cook!"

"When you're the teacher, Aunt Julia," Val laughed. "I think I'll even make an angel cake for dinner tonight. Joe's fond of it, and we're having pearl come for dinner, after golf."

Aunt Julia grunted, left the kitchen to her pupil. Val smiled a little as she beat the eggs. She was thinking about the first time she made angel cake for Pearl.

Even the icing was a success this time. Aunt Julia came back, tasted.

"Hmm. You flavored with lemon . . . not bad. What was I going to say? Oh, yes, Val, I've been thinking. Isn't it about time you and Joe went back to town and lived by yourselves?"

Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Tells Marion of the Plot

As I walked toward Marion's room slowly, for I dreaded the interview before me, I was puzzled at Mary's assertion that Avis Arlen was the "world's worst dancer." I knew, for Mrs. Arlen had told me so, that Avis had had dancing lessons since she was a child. But I also knew, upon the word of dancing teachers of experience that if a girl had certain awkward conformations of bones and a certain lack of pliability in muscles it was almost impossible to make a really good dancer of her, no matter how much instruction she was given.

But I was already at Marion's door and could waste no more time in speculation upon the dancing ability of Avis.

With distinct trepidation but firm determination I knocked, and not waiting for an answer pushed open the door. Marion was standing in the middle of the room, her head thrown back, her whole body tense.

She had not shed tears yet, and I was determined that she should not if I could help it. But I was very near to them myself as she called out "Oh, Aunty Madge!" with the intonations she has given that cry since the time when, as a little child, she was restored to her mother, and I cared for her during the absences from home which Lillian's profession at that time necessitated.

She was stumbling toward me and I advanced quickly to her, took her by the shoulders and held her away from me, looking down steadily into her eyes.

"Before you say anything, Marion," I said briskly, "I want to ask you two questions. Do you believe that I love you dearly, and that I have your best interests at heart?"

MADGE EXPLAINS

"You know I do," she said chokingly.

"Will you keep perfectly quiet, keep back your anger and reserve judgment until I finish the story of a little comedy that has been played for your benefit?"

Her eyes widened, but she answered steadily, "Yes, I promise."

"Then sit down."

"Before I begin, I want you to know this. Everything is all right—everything that you have worried over—and you are going to have the best time for the rest of the evening that a girl has ever had."

She opened her lips at that, evidently in protest, but closed them again as I hurried on.

"I am going to speak very plainly, Marion, but we'll never have to discuss this particular subject again, and I want you to know that you have no need to feel hurt or humiliated by any passing fancy that you may have had for Mr. Owen."

I swept through the name as quickly as I could, her eyes averted from my face as I mentioned it, but heard the quick, agonized gasp which she gave at the sound of it, and I knew that I had my work cut out for me.

COULD NOT WAIT

"Almost every girl of your age goes through the experience of being fascinated by some older man, and throwing aside a younger man's devotion for her ephemeral fancy. Your mother and I both had such experiences, so we knew that it could not be long until you would become as heartily tired of Mr. Owen's attentions as we became of the devotion of our elderly admirers."

She winced at the word "elderly," but I went relentlessly on.

"There were reasons—good ones, which I will explain to you some day when I have time—why we could not wait for your fancy to run its natural course and die out of itself. It was necessary, vitally so, that Mr. Owen be eliminated from the picture speedily. Therefore your mother and I, after much worried consultation, decided to help things along by staging a little comedy for your benefit. Remember," I warned her quickly as she stirred uneasily, "that you have promised to reserve judgment until the end of this."

"I'm remembering," she said, "but it's hard."

"I know, darling," I said, permitting myself a sympathetic tone for the first time, "but it won't be long now. But haven't you wondered over the fact that your mother has stopped criticizing Mr. Owen to you ever since you returned home from the Brixton camp? And has it never occurred to you to question whether Ronald's apparent infatuation for Mary was as real as it seemed?"

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

A philosopher once said something like this: "If you build a better mouse trap, though you live in the woods, the public will beat a path to your door to buy it." And many people are beating a path to the doors of the Schenley Theater this week where "Mystic" Clarke is the feature attraction.

Known throughout the country as a leading American physic, "Mystic" Clarke is telling one and all what the future holds for them in the way of business, love, marriage, social position and also where lost articles can be found.

Mystic Clarke was born 31 years ago in Miami, Fla., and was for two years swimming champion of his high school and is somewhat of a rugged fellow, which will stand him in good need Saturday when the several hundred members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club start asking him questions.

Most of the questions that the youngsters will ask, we believe, will be about their report cards which they are to get at the end of this month from school and it is expected that many of the questions also will be about the kind of occupation they will take up when they finish school and college.

TO ASK ABOUT DOG

One little girl, who noticed the advertisement in front of the theater yesterday, was all excited about the meeting, because she has lost her dog and has been heartbroken ever since. She believes that Mystic Clarke will tell her where she can find him.

Some of the people who have consulted Mystic "Clarke" in the past are: Senator Beaman, of Georgia; Eddie Cantor, famous stage, movie and radio star; George Herman (Babe) Ruth, mighty slugger of the world champion "Yankee' baseball team; Deacon Lutz, famous automobile racing driver; W. L. (Young) Stribling, one time contender for the heavyweight boxing championship of the world; Jesse Crawford, known all over the world as the poet of the organ, and Loretta Young, famous movie actress.

So, boys and girls, if there is anything that you would like to know about your school work, about your football team or the football games that are to be played by your team, what kind of business you are going to enter when you graduate from school, what your social position will be after you finish school, or if you have lost anything of value and want to know where it is ask Mystic "Clarke" on Saturday.

WRITE QUESTIONS

It will be advisable for the youngsters to write their questions at home so they won't lose a lot of time Saturday morning when the doors of the Schenley Theater are opened. Write your questions on a small slip of paper and deposit them in the large glass bowl just inside the door. That's all you have to do—"Mystic" Clarke will do the rest.

Be at the Schenley Theater early so that you can get seats down in front and see just how this "mystic" man works. You'll not only have a good time but you'll also have many a laugh.

In addition to "Mystic" Clarke, Harry Thomas, manager of the Schenley has arranged a splendid stage show for this week's meeting, and the Schenley Orchestra has several new and novel arrangements which it will play for the first time.

Chickens Come Home

Pennsylvania Republican Leaders, Stressing Party Loyalty, Are Reminded of 1930.

The principle that complainants must come into court with clean hands is brought to mind by pleas that Pennsylvanians uphold the tradition of the state and continue to stand by the G. O. P.

Other arguments failing, party regularity is advanced as a reason for voting for Hoover.

The Philadelphia Record remarks that Vare organization workers who stress "party loyalty" in a desperate effort to stem the pro-Roosevelt tide in Philadelphia will do so at the risk of much embarrassment, since few have forgotten that William S. Vare threw party loyalty overboard in 1930 to back Hemphill, the Democratic candidate, for Governor.

Chickens come home to roost. Not only Vare, but many other Republican leaders in Pennsylvania are estopped by their course two years ago from reproving Republicans who intend to vote for Roosevelt.

Let Them Be Published

It Will Be Worth What It Costs to Make the Tax Assessments Readily Ascertainable.

In answer to the resolution of the Chamber of Commerce calling for the publication of tax assessments "as a means of ending the tax favoritism, tax discrimination and tax evasion fostered by secret assessments," Thomas M. Benner, assistant city solicitor, points out that the assessments are open to public inspection. The county authorities say that is also true of the county assessments.

While the assessments are nominally open to inspection, the difficulties in the way of scanning them are so troublesome that not many persons will go to the inconvenience of finding out what valuations have been placed on their neighbors' properties for tax purposes. Consequently there is little check on unfairness.

If the assessments were published in such a way that everyone could easily find out what they are, the assessors would not dare show partiality, because it would be detected at once.

The objection has been made that the publication would be costly. It will be worth whatever it costs. The experience of other cities indicates that the plan will be profitable. It will lead to the leveling of inequalities, and the raising of unduly low assessments to the proper level is likely to bring in fresh tax revenue that will more than offset the losses resulting from the lowering of unduly high assessments.

The chamber's demand, based on a careful study of the subject by Councilman Robert Garland, a former president of the chamber, should be granted.

Never Excusable

And It Is Especially Reprehensible That Women Should Be Overworked Now When Others Need Jobs

"Share your work" is the slogan of a nation-wide movement aimed at reducing unemployment. Capital and labor have got together on the drive. It is urged that employers shorten the hours of labor, that more persons may be employed and thus enabled at least to buy the necessities of life and saved from the worry that goes with joblessness.

It is a sorry commentary on the attitude of certain Pennsylvania manufacturers on this matter that 58 of every 100 violations of Pennsylvania's labor laws, as reported by Miss Charlotte Carr, deputy secretary of the State Department of Labor and Industry, are for offenses against the laws limiting the number of hours in which women and children may be continuously employed.

Overworking women and children is inexcusable at any time. It is especially reprehensible right now, when the need is for the distribution of work among the largest possible number of wage earners.

Less Speed, Please

Wet Streets and Poorer Visibility Call for Extra Caution in Motoring.

Five deaths in traffic accidents over the week-end have weakened Pittsburgh's chance of winning the National Traffic Safety Contest as "the safest city in America."

More important still, the fatalities reveal a condition which, if not adequately dealt with, will result in other deaths.

The situation is that, although the weather is not so favorable for safe motoring as it was during the summer, some motorists are not showing the extra caution that wet streets and poor visibility demand.

The only effective way to deal with the condition is to drive more slowly, so that the car will be more readily under control.

The autumn months are the most dangerous of the year. Sixty-nine of last year's 172 traffic fatalities in Pittsburgh occurred in the last four months.

Take care!

Cultivate Good Taste

Pittsburgh Needs the Refined Entertainment That Can Be Obtained from a Symphony Orchestra.

Notwithstanding unemployment and wage cuts, Pittsburgh's promoters of professional boxing contests have not found it necessary to close their arenas.

If the community can furnish the money to support pugilism, it surely ought to be able to raise enough funds to pay for the five Sunday night concerts to be given this season by the Pittsburgh Symphony Society in Syria Mosque.

The Symphony Society is not having an easy time in its campaign for new members. It requires many more to finance the concerts.

It may be that the people find prize fights more enjoyable than symphony concerts. But they should support the symphony concerts nevertheless.

Those who are unable spontaneously to appreciate a symphony should cultivate a taste for it and thus add to the joy of living.

Womankind—And Unkind

It is nearly always some giddy, shallow-brained woman who starts a foolish fad or invents a freak fashion, which all the intelligent, "sensible" women rush breathlessly to follow.

It seems almost a shame for a girl to take a man who can win a golf tournament, stake a tent, drive a plane and ride a polo pony—and pin him down to running the lawnmower and walking the baby.

The reason why a woman keeps on asking a man to tell her that he loves her is probably because she has a sub-conscious conviction that, if she can make him say it over often enough he will come to believe it himself.

A man never realizes how much he values a hat, an umbrella or a woman's love until he sees some other Big Boy calmly walking off with it.

When a woman shows the first slight flicker of jealousy, she is boring the man, flattering the other woman—and insulting herself.

A man will stop right in the middle of a shave to telephone his sweetheart, before marriage. After marriage, he won't even part his lips under the lather to answer her.

Men are more cheerful and philosophic than women — because, no matter how much of his life lies behind a man, he always feels confident that there is a new adventure and another woman, waiting somewhere ahead of him.

ENGLAND DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Like the Bowery, London's East End is the last stop of failures before going off the deep end. With ominous monotony, life congeals in a bitter stagnation. Mile End road and East India Dock Road, leading to Limehouse, are bleak stretches whose mumble suggests a Jeremiah wail.

The economic blizzard leaves no particular blight, for squalor is perpetually at lowest ebb. Even entertainment is often salvaged from suffering. On Mile End Road, for instance, a crowd knotted to watch a seedy charlatan yank teeth gratis, with fingers, as a bloody prelude to hawking a pain killer.

He snatched tooth after tooth from dripping jaws, selling nostrums between extractions, as the audience yowled with glee. White wives of Chinese are numerous. Also peg-leg beggars, impudent hags, hot-bun men tolling bright bells, costermongers and a shabby variety of extraordinaries.

An herb doctor in cutaway stressed potency of a "blood regulator" while audaciously discussing social ills with Elizabethan frankness. Yet, like all slums I have seen, one feels not only the tug of the Old Testament but an undercurrent of friendliness. Only inquisitiveness is resented.

A funeral cortege threads every street, and it was noticeable they followed tiny white coffins. But amid the gloom of pink alm houses and charity homes with such a name as "Crippleage" there's zest for life. Somewhere I've read: "Hope keeps more people alive than all the doctors."

I idled through several labyrinthine Limehouse causeways, so immortalized by Thomas Burke, but before noon the tempo was sluggish. The only activity was about the docks where myriad ships were in throes of berthing and extraction. My guide—a Fleet street reporter—suggested a peek into an opium den, but I visited one here several years ago and already had stoked up enough woe for a day.

* * *

In a morning paper is a two-stick daily essay I never fail to read. It is "A Countryman's Diary," a cheery canticle graphically fragrant of England's beloved countryside. The author bears a kind of old burlesque name—Percy W. D. Izzard—but he knows the soil and his phrasing leaps out with majestic splendor. I quote from a fresh issue: "Hollyhocks peer over the garden wall, telling passersby of peace within. Almost do sunflowers join them but will not count the steps of the sun until they get their heads above the old mossed bricks." This goes on in sleepy cadence. A true Englishman, wreathed in pipe-smoke, loves this type of columning. And after some American columns of late, I adore it myself.

I just missed Hannen Swaffer at Simpson's lunch hour. He is the fiery critic who got slapped by Tallulah Bankhead in a crowded dining-room years ago. To Fleet Street he is "Swaff," a genius in shabby attire, with shuffling walk and stutter. He quit drinking after years of lushing and later adopted spiritualism as his tenet of faith. He has made many enemies, but those who dislike him admit he is a square-shooter. His targets are those able to defend themselves, never small fry. In addition to a diversity of talents and despite a pronounced impediment he is considered one of the finest after-dinner speakers in London.

There is a legend that more than 5,000 crooks all over the world are eternally plotting to rob the Bank of England. At any rate it is the best protected in the world. A routine sight each evening is the company of grenadiers marching through the streets to relieve the day guard. The great safes are sunk in wells and so mechanically rigged that in a second, day or night, they can be flooded.

* * *

No visit is complete without seeing boys hanging over London Bridge. And especially interesting is the fact boys have been leaning over London Bridge for 500 years. No one knows the why of this Narcissus attraction. But there they stand like rows of sad-eyed chicabiddies—listening to the forlorn cluck and sag of the river and gazing with the same vacancy Dickens chronicled long ago.

* * *

And this very second, beholding the terrifying shrink of a travel checkbook, I feel as though I'd like to join the London Bridge boys in a little innocuous desultory gazing myself. I might even join them in a broad jump into the tooting old Thames. In fact there seems little left but the river.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I don't enjoy being good.

Yes, I realize that isn't the conventional thing to say. Goodness is supposed to be a jolly affair, and proper grown-ups are expected to give it plenty of pleasing promotion, as Mom and Dad did, when they told us in our little-tad days:

"BE GOOD AND YOU'LL BE HAPPY."

Yet even then I accepted the statement with reservations! Goodness, per se, held no appeal for me. All my natural inclinations were obviously evil. The things I wanted most to do were invariably the bad things. And "being bad" was usually a delightful performance—provided one wasn't found out. Then why should being good make me happy?

But Mom and Dad assured me that it would. If I would be a good girl, everybody would love me; nobody would get mad at me, and I would get all the nice things I wanted.

Well I certainly wanted a lot of nice things, and it would undoubtedly be a relief not to have people mad at me. So, reluctantly, I decided to give goodness a chance, and I've been giving it a chance ever since. But after nearly 50 years of noble experiment, I'm bound to say that I have never yet really enjoyed goodness.

Righteousness still sounds wonderful. It makes great sales talks. But I regret to state that, in my case, none of them have come true.

Goodness has never been either a comfortable or easy state for me. To the contrary, I have experienced the most acute discomfort, irritation, loneliness, humiliation and downright risk in the process of being good.

Nor has goodness made me popular. At times there has been some faint applause. But when I've really worked hardest at the job, when I have been definitely and defiantly brave and honest and noble, I have invariably found myself just about as popular as a dose of hives. No one has approved of me.

"Why on earth," my exasperated friends have cried, "can't she act regular and let well enough alone? Why does she have to stir up such a fuss about being good, just when everything was sitting pretty?"

For, of course, real, dynamic goodness does stir up a fuss. That was one thing my godly elders had omitted to mention. They had pictured goodness as a passive, peaceful state; but it practically never is. Real, two-fisted goodness is always active, always opposed to the smug laziness, cowardice, stupidity and selfishness upon which we base most of our respectability. And truly good people are nearly always a pain in the neck.

That's why, despite pious axioms, you WON'T be happy if you're good. And neither will anyone who knows you!

And yet, in spite of these discouraging discoveries, I've kept on trying to be good, for, despite its discomfort, there's something about goodness that makes it worth while. It may raise Cain with the status quo, but it also does wonders for your pride.

BEING GOOD ISN'T COMFORTABLE OR EASY—BUT IT IS THE PROUDEST CONDITION I KNOW. IT COSTS PLENTY—BUT IT IS ALWAYS WORTH ALL IT COSTS, FOR IT'S A MAN-SIZE JOB, AND IF YOU CAN PUT IT OVER YOU'RE GOING SOME!

Making Mincemeat of A Demagogic 'Danger'

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

With all the polls throughout the country pointing to a landslide for Roosevelt, the supporters of Mr. Hoover and his board of strategy have entered upon a policy of utterly reckless and demagogic statements emanating from men whose self-respect should restrain them.

Only the desperation of the situation can explain the attempt of Mr. Coolidge to arouse class feeling in his rather sorry attack on Mr. Roosevelt because, like Theodore Roosevelt, his family had money and influence. This, from the former President, sounds the depths of the demagogy of the campaign thus far.

Along with this, Mr. Coolidge contributed another choice morsel to an unsavory campaign of despair when he spoke so feelingly of the great love the workingmen employed by Mr. Hoover had for him. These workingmen were Burmese, scarcely out of slavery, Chinese coolies, and worse in Russia, and the least said about them the better. These are the "workingmen" Mr. Hoover referred to four years ago when he said he had employed 100,000 men and "never had a strike."

Another Piece of Demagogy

But the most desperate and reckless piece of demagogy and misrepresentation of all was reserved for Mr. Hoover himself when he related a lurid tale, so long concealed, about the time when we were so near ruin we were about to go off the gold standard "in two weeks."

It was after that amazing statement that the market slumped in New York and the dollar fell in Europe.

And that story evidently is a pure figment of the imagination conceived for the purpose of bolstering up a failing cause by creating a picture in the public mind of Mr. Hoover, buried, solitary and alone in his closet, grappling with another Gettysburg, and almost on his knees with God, saving the country with another of his "miracles."

And Senator Carter Glass, the greatest statesman in matters of finance in the country, chairman of the Senate Committee dealing with such things, makes mincemeat of that piece of demagogy.

The Story Mr. Hoover Will Not Answer

Immediately after Hoover made that utterly reckless assertion to serve a selfish end, when the dollar began to fall as a result, and the market to slump, Senator Glass asserted that if such a condition had existed his committee had not been informed—and that he does not believe a word of it. At which Senator Jim Watson, quite a different type of man, as every responsible businessman and banker knows, rushed into print with a very distinct recollection of a conference at which Senators were informed that the gold standard was in desperate danger.

The reply of Senator Glass pulverizes the whole desperate trick of selfish politicians, willing to endanger the dollar and destroy confidence in our financial structure. Here is the story that Mr. Hoover will not answer:

"I very distinctly remember every detail of that conference," says Glass, "at which not one word was uttered as to the jeopardy of the gold standard in the United States."

There is not a man in the financial world who will question the integrity of that statement.

The purpose of that conference was to find means to stop the appalling "flood of bank failures by broadening the reserve base of the Federal Reserve Act," and to create a psychology that would stop the tendency to withdraw deposits for hoarding. And that was done at the President's suggestion, by taking several provisions from the pending Glass bill and incorporating them in a new measure for immediate passage.

But not a single word was uttered about the gold standard being in danger.

What Was Discussed

There was a discussion of the withdrawal of French gold but—and every man of consequence in the financial world will know this is true—

"It was pointed out that every dollar taken or likely to be withdrawn was 'earmarked gold,' not counted in the gold reserve of the Federal Reserve Banking System, and therefore not affecting in any way the gold status of the United States."

That was discussed at the conference. But—

"There was positively no intimation that anybody felt the least apprehension that the United States might be driven from the gold standard."

Glass Told The Truth

Senator Watson, with his usual reckless demagogy in a campaign, said that on February 1 a certain amount of gold, rather low, was held by the Federal Reserve System. Senator Glass had given a very much higher figure. Here, then, is a matter of knowledge or veracity, and Senator Glass settles it by saying:

"The amount of gold held was $3579,000,000 is verified to me today by Federal Reserve authorities in Washington."

That is, the administration is forced to admit that Glass told the truth and Watson did not. That is unfortunate for the success of trick scare.

But that was not all. In addition, as Glass points out, "there were outstanding at the time and in general circulation over $757,000,000 of gold certificates which could have been recaptured by Federal Reserve Banks in exchange for Federal Reserve notes."

But get this: Here Mr. Hoover tells us of his desperate fear that we would be driven off the gold standard at the time of this conference—a little matter that he kept to himself. But Glass says:

"In less than one week after this conference Federal Reserve authorities officially reported to me that the Federal Reserve banks had a sufficient supply of gold in reserve to extend additional discount facilities in the enormous sum of $4,000,000,000."

And Glass concludes, as any sane man must, that—

"In these recorded circumstances for any responsible person to have said or felt that this country was within two weeks of being driven off the gold standard would have amounted to actual mental or economic delinquency."

An "Irresponsible Official"

At this conference Ogden Mills, of the Treasury, sat next to Glass and did not know we were in such desperate danger. In truth in a few days he appeared before the Glass committee to say:

"We have on hand sufficient gold resources at home to permit us to meet all demands."

Thus even he, who is supposed to know, knew nothing of the fact that Mr. Hoover, locked in his chamber with his conscience, his patriotism and his God, was grappling, solitary and alone, in the performance of the miracle of saving the gold standard.

And Eugene Meyer, Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, appeared and on his solemn responsibility as an official, said:

"There is not the slightest doubt in the mind of any responsible official about either the ability or the intention of the United States to stay on the gold standard."

From which one gathers that if Mr. Hoover thought there was danger he is an "irresponsible official."

And so Carter Glass makes mincemeat of this disreputable piece of petty politics and campaign demagogy which made the market sag in New York and sent the dollar down in Europe. A politician capable of such a trick for votes is unfit to be at the head of a nation.

SPECIAL VALUES — LOOK AT PAGES 5 & 6 — SPECIAL CUT PRICES

A cordial invitation is extended to all Pittsburgh by The May Drug Company to visit their newest and finest drug store, at the corner of William Penn Way and Seventh Avenue, in the Gulf Building, Pittsburgh's Newest and Highest Office Building. This new drug store is surrounded by a rapidly developing section of downtown Pittsburgh that will function largely in the future progress of our city.

To harmonize with the character and design of the building in which it is located, this new store has been designed in a most modernistic manner and furnished with the finest of drug store equipment.

FOUNTAIN SERVICE MEETS MODERN NEED

GRILL-CHEF TO PRESIDE OVER MOST MODERN OF EQUIPMENT

Steel and Marble Blended to Create Last Word in Fountain Design; Table, Counter Service Available

One of Pittsburgh's finest soda fountains has been installed in the new May Drug Company's store in the Gulf Building Constructed of stainless steel and marble, it has been designed to express a new note in sanitary refrigeration equipment.

Not just a place to grab a quick snack, this fountain will be presided over by a grill-chef, the first of his kind in Pittsburgh. All the grill's pastries will be baked, and the food prepared in a modern kitchen connected with the store, under the chef's careful direction.

With a background of 24 years of experience, many of them spent in the kitchens of one of Fifth avenue's largest restaurants, this culinary majordomo will bridge the gap between ordinary fountain service and the art of presenting well-cooked and well-balanced meals.

The hurried shopper or office worker, the after-the-movies or after-the-theater crowd, will find table service with an extensive lineup of beautifully upholstered and indirectly illuminated booths.

The combined thought and effort of architect, decorator, renting agent, merchandising and display experts, company executives and store managers have gone into the planning of the new store's fountain service. The result is a last-word perfection of design and utility. Neither time nor expense was spared to create not only a culinary regime of efficient, sanitary and convenient service, but a pleasant and comfortable environment as well.

With the optimistic faith in Pittsburgh which has characterized the May institution for the past 40 years, the May-Liggett executives have expressed their staunch faith in the continued growth and development of the business section in which the new store is located.

Experts to Direct Cosmetics Sales In New Store

Mays offers its largest toilet goods department in the new Gulf Building under the direction of a specialist. Miss Helen Brooker, toilet goods expert with one of the national manufacturers, has been engaged to manage the department.

All important European and the finest American-made cosmetics, toilet goods and perfumes are being carried to fill every specific need for milady.

Seek to Isolate Distemper Germ

MONCTON, N. B., Oct. 19.—In an effort to isolate the distemper germ and find a serum, experiments are now under way in the Welcome Research Laboratories in London, England. Fifty silver foxes from ranches in New Brunswick have been shipped to London for experimental purposes, to help canine pets.

College Freshman Has Unique Job

WESTERVILLE, O., Oct. 19.—While this college town sleeps, Frank Heitz, 18, a freshman at Otterbein College, sits in the fire house with a textbook in his hand, guarding the citizenry.

Build New Airdrome For Japanese Planes

CHANGCHUN, Oct. 19.—A new airdrome is to be laid out at Kwang-chengtzu, a couple of miles north of Changchun, for the use of Manchukuo and Japanese airplanes.

THE FIRST MAY STORE IN MARKET STREET 40 YEARS AGO

Seeds of May Idea Sown 40 Years Ago

The seeds of the May idea of "Quality-Service and Price" first took root, 40 years ago, in Market street between Fifth avenue and Liberty avenue.

At that time May's occupied a half storeroom with a floor space of 800 square feet.

The vision and foresight of its founder together with the support and co-operation of loyal workers has been responsible for its successful growth.

Don't Let Gray Hair Worry You Before 60
Now simply brushing hair ends grayness so perfectly no one will suspect you ever had a gray hair.
Don't let gray hair ruin your business or social career because it makes people think you are "too old." You can now end this handicap easily, quickly and inexpensively right at home. And the results will be so perfect that no one will suspect you have done a thing to your hair.

DO ONE SIMPLE THING
Just sprinkle a few drops of KOLOR-BAK on your hair brush, and brush your hair as usual. This wonderful, colorless liquid will cause your gray hairs to disappear like magic. A new, youth-like color will be imparted to those ugly, gray hairs. And as your hair becomes youth-like in color, you will look years younger, far more attractive.
Obtain KOLOR-BAK at any May's & Liggett's Drug Store. Use as directed—and—almost before you realize it your gray hairs will be youth-like in color. Insist upon KOLOR-BAK for it is different in formula and results from all other methods. No other product is "just as good."

NOVEL DISPLAY USED

Arrangement of counter and window displays in Mays Gulf Building store was directed under the personal supervision of R. E. Lansbery, professor of displays at Duquesne University.

Mr. Lansbery is a well-known authority and has been in charge of advertising and displays at Mays for many years.

Rayon Corporation Can't Fill Orders

Monster Dinosaur's Hips 7 Feet Wide

BILLINGS, Mont., Oct. 19.—What is said to be the first complete skeleton of a hoplitosaurus, a branch of the dinosaurus family, was recently unearthed on the Crow Indian Reservation, 50 miles southeast of here, by an expedition headed by Curator Barnum Brown, of the American Museum of Natural History. The immense creature, more than seven feet wide at the hips, was covered with a bony armor that made it almost impervious to attack.

Clerks in May's Get Training in Storeroom

Stocked shelves, trimmed windows and counter displays form the "blackboard" from which the personnel, in monthly meetings, is taught modern sales methods.

Special training is provided that sales persons can intelligently answer customers' questions as to the merit of products.

Circulating Library Boon to Readers

A modern circulating library will be a new service offered at Mays in its newest Gulf Building store. The latest books on adventure, mystery and travel will be constantly available.

FAITH IN PITTSBURGH

Faith in the future of Pittsburgh and the desire to share in the development of the newest downtown business section warranted the enormous expenditure to establish one of the city's finest drug stores in the Gulf Building, according to Charles G. Judge, president of May's Drug Company and general manager in Pennsylvania for the May-Liggett Company.

Declaring the city needed a drug store of this modern type, Mr. Judge, who himself is a graduate registered pharmacist from Columbia University of 1907, pointed out:

"The development of this section of the business district is one of the most important steps of progress made in years. The city's finest structures will surround our store.

"It was only natural that May's wanted a place of prominence in this important setting. Such a place demanded we offer the outstanding features in equipment and service plus the most complete lines in all departments. It is our expression of confidence in the future of Pittsburgh."

THOUSANDS OF GIFTS

Due to the tremendous values to be offered during the two-day formal opening sale being conducted by the May Drug Company in its new Gulf Building Store, a huge crowd is anticipated.

Extensive preparations have been made to give May brand of service to the many thousands who will be attracted by this gala event.

In addition to the attractive prices quoted on medicines, toiletries and sundries, free gifts are being offered with purchases.

Among the free souvenirs listed in the advertisement on Pages 4 and 5 of this section are gift boxes, decorated tea aprons, root beer mugs, water glasses and chocolates.

New Kneipp Cure In Black Forest

NEUSTADT, Black Forest, Germany, Oct. 19.—A new Kneipp cure institution recently established here is situated at an elevation of more than a half mile, making it the most elevated bath of this kind in Germany. The attendants were trained in Bad Worishofen, noted Kneipp cure resort.

EXPERT SALES FORCE

Personnel of the new May drug store in the Gulf Building has been especially selected from ablest salespersons trained to the company's system in its other stores.

Harold M. Jackson, well-known in drug store circles here since 1918, has been named manager. Miss Grace Underwood will be assistant manager. She also will serve as hostess at the modern soda grill.

High Standard Set In Prescriptions

In order to carry out the requirements of the doctor in a highly efficient manner, the May Drug Company has fully equipped its newest prescription department in the new Gulf Building drug store.

Manned with registered pharmacists of known ability, experience and trustworthiness, who realize the importance of their profession, May's gives assurance that the completed prescription will contain exactly the prescribed ingredients, compounded scientifically.

Relieves His Own Mother of Neuritis

She's Out of Bed and on Her Feet Every Day Now

So certain does Nurito banish sciatica, rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago and neuritis that the head of the syndicate which has purchased this German Specialist's prescription treats his own mother with it. Although 80 years old, she never feels a pain or ache since using it. Many who had despaired of ever getting relief have been overcome with joy after a few doses of Nurito. For not only has it stopped their suffering but it has done so without the use of narcotics or opiates.

If you're tired of using ineffective remedies, make this simple test: Go to your druggist and ask for Nurito. If the very first three doses do not stop your pain your money will be refunded without question. Don't wait a single unnecessary minute—go to your druggist right now.

Too Much Acid!

Then take this sparkling delightful drink that Italy has known since 1880.

There are many preparations designed to neutralize acid conditions but there is only one that gives quick results and still is so pleasant you'll drink it for its taste alone. And that preparation has been known all over Europe since 1880. It is called

BRIOSCHI

(Pronounced Bree-osky)

In the form of appetizing pure white crystals it foams and bubbles when poured into a half glass of cold water. Quickly corrects sour stomach, sick headaches, biliousness and all conditions caused by too much acid. Once you try Brioschi you'll become a confirmed user for it's the pleasant way of keeping fit.

SO BIG

HERE'S the big bottle of Canada Dry! Twenty cents for five full glasses! . . . there's a value that speaks for itself. More particularly so, because until you taste Canada Dry, you can't imagine how good a ginger ale can be.

For flavor, for aroma, for sparkle . . . you'd have to scan a wine list of fine old vintages in France to find a beverage that equals it.

Just to learn how to keep cool for a week—order a case of The Champagne of Ginger Ales. Or buy it by the bottle. Ask for "Canada Dry" by name.

EVERY MONDAY AND WEDNESDAY—Jack Benny, inimitable master of ceremonies—George Olsen's Music and Ethel Shutta—a half hour of sparkling wit and music. 9:30 P. M. over Station KDKA.
